FIRST MURPHY HOUSE

Coffee house, clubhouse?

■ As many dream about a 'Sancho Panza' in the village, others say cafe would be bad use for historic monument.

By PAUL WOLF

MANY CARMELITES have drawn an inspiration from the past — a past not so distant to those who have spent a lifetime on the Monterey Peninsula.

Lively, hip, sociable — the words fall short in attempts to describe Sancho Panza, a coffee house that thrived in the Gutierrez adobe on Calle Principal in Monterey during the late 1950s and early 1960s.

No one was envisioning quite the same thing for the delicate, often barren First Murphy House, the historic city property located on Lincoln Street and 6th Avenue. Sancho Panza belongs to another time.

But many who spoke before an ad hoc committee Tuesday afternoon argued that a more expansive use of the building should be developed.

"A coffee house is a very living enterprise, an empty space into which people can come and be themselves," David Walton, Sancho Panza, founder and property, told members of the First Murphy Uses Committee.

Poetic words

His poetic words were rekindling a palpable nostalgia. It was clear that, to many speakers at the meeting, Walton's place retains a rich mythology. But the question arose: Is a coffee house right for

First Murphy?

"I think a coffee house is the greatest idea in the world, but just not in First Murphy," said Jane Mayer, a former Murphy House volunteer and inveterate chess player at the building. "What's wrong with Flanders Mansion or Sunset Center."

"I think a coffee house would be blasphemy," echoed Noel Van Bibber. "I like the Murphy House as it is, as an historic monument to Carmel."

So two camps were heard: One was taken by the idea of a coffee house; the other held a protective stance, willing to support only a few more quiet uses, such as additional lectures.

The two viewpoints different intents that went along with the acquisition, relocation and restoration of the M.J. Murphy structure: the value as a social hall, the goal of historic preservation.

"Let's not simply have a museum there, and then say, 'That cup and saucer Mrs. Murphy used to drink from,' Robert Campbell, a mystery writer and

Carmel man opted for icy waters

In attempt to evade police, he 'jumped in ocean and started swimming'

By SCOTT BREARTON

A CARMEL man who jumped into the ocean off Carmel Beach Friday morning in an attempt evade police was apprehended at Stillwater Cove after swimming in the 50-degree water for more than 90 minutes.

"We had all avenues of escape covered," said Carmel Police Sgt. Ken O'Donovan. "He ran around us, jumped in the ocean and started swimming."

After a lengthy standoff, Roderick Graham Deas, a 38-year-old Carmel resident, was picked up at 10:05 a.m. by a Coast Guard vessel and brought to Stillwater Cove in Pebble Beach, where an ambulance was standing by.

He was transported to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, where he was treated for hypothermia and released into police custody, according to a hospital spokesperson.

Deas is being held at Monterey County Jail in lieu of $7,500 bail. Officials at the Monterey County District Attorney's office said Deas was arraigned Monday on one count of spousal abuse, one count of assaulting a police officer and one count of resisting arrest. He pleaded not guilty to all charges.

'He didn't want to be rescued.'

Spousal abuse and assaulting a police officer are felony crimes. A preliminary hearing is set for Dec. 8.

It all began at about 7:30 a.m., when O'Donovan and Officer Theresa Rabaut arrived at a home on San Antonio and Fourth avenues after receiving a report of a domestic dispute there.

After arriving, police separated Deas and his girlfriend. O'Donovan then asked Deas to step outside to give his side of the story. As the discussion progressed, according to O'Donovan, Deas became agitated and insisted that he was not going to be arrested because he said he had done nothing wrong.

Then, Deas allegedly threw a punch at O'Donovan and ran off. A brief foot pursuit followed, during which he was able to elude police.

About a half-hour later, O'Donovan said Carmel police located Deas at the northernmost end of Carmel Beach, hiding in the bushes.

Carmel youths sentenced to juvenile hall for CHS arson

By PAUL WOLF

TWO OF the three Carmel juveniles implicated in the June 13 arson at Carmel High School will do time at Monterey County Juvenile Hall in Salinas.

Superior Court Judge John Anton handed down the sentences Wednesday afternoon at the Monterey Courthouse.

The juveniles were arrested June 20 following a two-week crime spree that included auto theft, vandalism and arson. Damage to the science wing has been estimated at $750,000.

All three defendants are 17 years old. Two of the three will serve 150 days in juvenile hall, with a mixture of community service and home supervision added to the punishments.

The third defendant will be assigned to a group home and serve 200 hours of community service.

'Milkdud' dies of pneumonia following lengthy illness

By SCOTT BREARTON

THE MONTEREY Bay Aquarium has lost a dear old friend.

"Milkdud," an abandoned female sea otter who was brought to the aquarium during its first season, died last Saturday. She was nine years old.

"The sea otter staff is obviously saddened by this animal's death," said Chris Harrold, director of life sciences for the Monterey Bay Aquarium. "They worked very closely with this animal. She was a founding otter."

The otter's death on Nov. 27 resulted from complications related to pneumonia, according to Hank Armstrong, director of public relations for the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

"Animals, like people, are subject to viral infections," Armstrong said. "At this point, we don't know what the cause of the pneumonia was or where it came from. But she'd been under the care of her veterinarian since Nov. 13."

According to Armstrong, Milkdud - a twin - was abandoned by her natural mother shortly after birth. He said she was picked up by volunteers and brought to the aquarium in October 1984 for care and supervision.

"She was cared for primarily by paid staff and volunteers," Armstrong said. "It was a combined effort."

When Milkdud was rescued, Harrold said the fledgling orphan pup rehabilitation program consisted of bringing young otters back to health so they could survive in captivity.

Harrold said the aquarium's Sea Otter Rescue and Care Program grew out of its earlier procedure.

"All of our exhibit otters came to us as orphans," Harrold said, noting there are only three otters in the exhibit now. "They have been here since they were very young. Adult animals do not take well to captivity."

Many of the animals housed in the aquarium's exhibits have been rehabilitated, according to Harrold, who noted the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service does not allow animals to be picked up in the wild and put into an exhibit.

Interestingly, another native sea otter died over the weekend. Armstrong said a wild otter was brought to the aquarium's Research and Care Center after being attacked by a shark.

"It didn't recover from its injuries," Armstrong said. "It sustained major bite wounds."

Aquarium's Sea Otter Rescue and Care Program - an overview

THE MONTEREY Bay Aquarium Sea Otter Rescue and Care Program is the only program in the world that rescues and rehabilitates California sea otters with the goal of returning them to the wild.

Since its inception in 1984, the program has saved many individual members of this threatened marine mammal species, according to Monterey Bay Aquarium officials. Perhaps more importantly, it is generating information about the care of otters that will be vital to the survival of the species in the event an oil spill or other environmental catastrophe occurs along their range on California's central coast.

Until the aquarium began caring for abandoned sea otter pups, virtually nothing was known about how to keep these marine mammals alive once separated from their mothers. Over time, aquarists and veterinarians have developed a diet and protocol for care that has resulted in a survival rate of nearly 100 percent for otter pups brought to the center in reasonably good health.

There also has been some success in rehabilitating and releasing adult otters. The Marine Mammal Center in Tiburon has been assisting in this effort.

Theater would revive performing arts in village

By PAUL WOLF

THERE IS a touch of irony in the prospect: The theater company whose name derives from the cities of Pacific Grove and Monterey wishes to become a Carmel institution.

If GroveMont Theater's purchase of the Golden Bough Cinema goes through as planned, the historic playhouse promises to boost Carmel's standing as a performing arts center.

GroveMont has until Jan. 15 to raise $1.25 million to buy the building from United Artists, Inc., according to GroveMont Executive Director Stephen Moorer. The company has reached about 80 percent of its goal.

Obviously, GroveMont — a disheartened renter of facilities for many years — stands to benefit from its new home. But, in addition, the venerable Golden Bough building — with its two stages — would make a suitable venue for a number of groups who would be eager to rent the main stage.

Already expressing interest in using the facility, according to Moorer, are the San Jose Opera, the Carmel Ballet Academy, the Carmel-based Children's Experimental Theater, the Monterey Opera Association and Youth Music Monterey.

Larger venue

"We could well make use of the Golden Bough," said Marcia Cambrell Hovick, artistic director for the Children's Experimental Theater, listing the advantages of a venue bigger than the Indoor Forest Theater the group currently uses.

"Word travels fast," Moorer said with a certain satisfaction.

The Golden Bough, located on Monte Verde between 8th and 9th Avenue, was built as the Arts and Crafts Theater building 71 years ago. Its names and uses have changed with the decades, but there is a widespread desire to come full circle.

Many veterans of the stage, such as Hovick herself, remember performing at the Golden Bough three decades ago or longer.

"Historically, the Golden Bough is on a par with the Forest Theater," Hovick said.

GroveMont, which has been renting spaces in Monterey since 1986, is poised to buy the movie house from UA for $1.15 million. It must raise an additional $100,000 for the renovation.

So far, loans, cash contributions and pledges total $1,015,000. Major donors include the David and Lucile Packard Foundation, the Joseph and Carolyn Samson foundation and the Barnet Segal Charitable Trust.

Other donations and pledges have come from David and Norma Lewis, the Buck Foundation, Hilton and Bertie Bialek, Davis Factor Jr., William and Nancy Doolittle, the McMahan Foundation, The Skaggs Foundation, the Community Foundation for Monterey County, Bob Bussinger and

Forest and Beach members tackle tree disease

Though time may be running out, commissioners play waiting game

By SCOTT BREARTON

FOREST AND Beach commissioners have taken a "let's wait and see" approach to dealing with a fungus that City Forester Cary Kelly says threatens the health of Carmel's urban forest.

"I don't think we know enough about it (pitch canker) to say 'let's cut down all the Monterey Pines,'" said Commissioner Roy Thomas at Tuesday's Forest and Beach Commission meeting. "My question is, shouldn't we learn a little bit more about this?"

But time may be running out.

According to Kelly, experts predict a "very large percentage" of Carmel's pine trees will become infected with pitch canker over the next five to 10 years. While there is no known cure for the fungus, Kelly said efforts are underway to develop pine seedlings that are resistant to it.

On Oct. 18, samples taken from trees showing symptoms of pitch canker were sent to a plant pathologist for testing. The results confirmed the presence of the fungus, and a press conference was held Nov. 9 to inform the public about the potentially far-reaching implications.

So far, Kelly reports 139 infected trees within the city limits, all north of Ocean Avenue.

Pitch canker is a disease affecting pine trees caused by a fungus that infects the tips of branches, causing them to wilt and die. According to Kelly, it also infects the trunk, limbs and roots, causing cankers which produce large quantities of pitch. He said insects may play a role in transmitting the disease by creating an infection site for the pathogen.

Individual trees vary in the degree of susceptibility to pitch canker, Kelly said. Some may remain healthy, some may become disfigured with dead limbs and others may die.

The fungus is responsible for the death of hundreds of pines in the Santa Cruz area, according to Kelly.

Kelly said experts estimate it could take as long as five years to develop strains of resistant pines through genetic research. He hinted that native strains of Monterey Pines — which seem to be more resistant to the fungus — may provide the answer to the question of how to save the forest.

Meanwhile, commissioners are considering a plan of attack to deal with the problem. Some indicated the best course of action is to wait until more information becomes available.

'A force of nature'

"I'd be reluctant to see us go through extraordinary measures with something that's a force of nature," said Commissioner Don Kremer, suggesting the commission learn as much as possible from experts first. "It seems to me that Mother Nature is going to take its course."

Kremer said planting native Monterey Pine seedlings may be the way to go: "If we stop planting trees, we're just helping the disease. As far as I'm concerned, planting Monterey Pines will buy time until Mother Nature can take care of the problem."

But Commissioner Bob Kohn disagreed: "I'm not sure we should plant any more trees."

Kelly recommended the planting of more Monterey cypress and redwoods, while Thomas insisted that planting still more Monterey pines would better ensure its survival.

Kelly noted, however, that planting more pines would only provide more hosts for voracious insects.

Commissioner Karen Ferlito voiced her opposition to planting other species of trees to replace those lost to the fungus.

"We are in a pine forest," Ferlito said. "If we plant other trees, we'll be taking up space that could've and should've been for pines."

"I'd hate to sit around for the next 10 or 15 years and watch them all die," she added, urging commissioners to consult other sources before acting and to consider gathering seeds from unaffected trees.

Kremer said he would not change his approach in determining whether or not a tree should be removed based on the presence of pitch canker.

"I think diversity in our forest is probably healthy," he said.

While Kelly acknowledged the prospect of losing Carmel's urban forest to pitch canker was a "tough pill to swallow," he said the commission "would probably know a great deal more a year from now."

No pun intended, he added, "I don't expect any 'clear-cut' answers today."

Carmel's Joe Klaas 'encouraged'

Suspect nabbed, but still no sign of Polly

By PAUL WOLF

AS A suspect Tuesday was taken into custody in connection with the Oct. 1 kidnapping of a 12-year-old Petaluma girl, the question remains: Where is Polly Klaas?

"I think it is encouraging we have found the (alleged) kidnapper, but we want to find Polly," said grandfather Joe Klaas, who lives in Carmel with his wife Betty Jane.

He was interviewed Wednesday morning on the radio station KGO after FBI and Petaluma authorities reported a breakthrough.

Richard Allen Davis, 39, is being held at Mendocino County Jail in Ukiah. Police would not disclose the evidence that led to Davis' arrest, but the suspect was reportedly spotted as resembling the composite drawing released after the kidnapping.

The suspect has a long criminal record that includes two kidnapping convictions. Davis, however, is being held on a parole violation. "We are developing information, and we are hoping to bring charges against him," said Petaluma Police Sgt. Mike Kerns.

At a press conference Wednesday morning, the Kerns and FBI agent Rick Smith could provide no information on whether Polly Klaas is alive or where she may be.

They did, however, discredit rumors that human remains reportedly discovered near Ukiah were those of Polly Klaas. "This is absolutely false," Kerns told more than two dozen reporters who had assembled in Petaluma.

Meanwhile, Joe Klaas urged redoubling efforts to find his granddaughter, abducted at knifepoint. "I really want people who know this man (Davis) to report whether they have seen him with Polly."

An additional press conference was scheduled for 4 p.m. Wednesday, after Pine Cone deadline.

Fate of Pescadero Canyon puts city in double bind

■ With the planning commission's recommendation to acquire half a dozen canyon lots, the only question facing city council and staff is how they will be paid for.

By PAUL WOLF

IN THE rugged terrain of Pescadero Canyon, where the owners of a half dozen lots hope to realize the value of their property, the city is caught between a rock and a hard place.

And city officials are now applying their best creative thinking toward finding a way out of the jam — one that will not take too long, cost too much or try the already worn patience of property owners.

There is a widespread desire to preserve six undeveloped canyon lots fronting on 2nd Avenue near the Pebble Beach border. But no one can say how it would be done.

The Carmel Planning Commission, spared of the financial issues, spoke of one mind Nov. 17 — voting 7-0 to recommend to the Carmel City Council that no more development take place in Pescadero Canyon.

The council is scheduled to meet Tuesday and grapple with the policy question of whether to follow the commission's lead. "The planning commission has recommended purchase, but we (the council) have made it clear the city doesn't have the money," said Mayor Ken White.

Last year, one attempt at a land swap with property owner Chris Tescher was a failure, and the experience has cast doubts on "trading development rights."

But such strategies will have to be considered if the land is to be preserved

— Bob Fischer

as open habitat space, according to City Administrator Jere Kernsar.

Zoning allows new homes to be constructed on the lots, but the Carmel General Plan and coastal regulations — originating from state mandates — delineate "environmentally sensitive habitat."

The designation could be interpreted as allowing only "resource-dependent uses," according to Kernsar. These uses would include nature trails and habitat observation stations — hardly the uses one would expect the property owners to settle for.

The question emerges: Would the city prevail in a court of law if it substantially diminishes someone's property values?

Specific plan

Roseth has proposed developing a specific plan for the canyon that would allow for limited residential development. He said there is no way to characterize the habitat values without a biological study. Moreover, he explained, the habitat designation would not necessarily preclude all development.

On Tuesday, the council may choose to pursue a biological report, or declare that further delay is not desirable.

"To learn your property is in an uncertain state is to leave you in a position where you can't do anything," said Commissioner Ed Jordan, who participated in an informational session Nov. 29.

(The meeting included representatives of city staff, city council and commission, as well as City Attorney Don Freeman.)

Councilman Bob Fischer, who did not attend the meeting, was not prepared to make promises, or place the highest priority on Pescadero acquisitions.

"If there are any environmentalists out there who believe these lots are worth preserving, they should set up a foundation and raise the money," he said in a telephone interview. "I can't see the city buying these lots."

The commission has added some ur-

Carmel gets boost from 'Good Morning America' telecast

CBA's Jepson relates 'innkeepers, business people have seen a very positive effect' on tourism here

By PAUL WOLF

JUST THREE weeks after ABC's Good Morning America broadcast from Carmel, the village is experiencing a boon from the national exposure.

"November is normally quite a slow month, but this November was very good — both for accommodations and retail," said Toni Jepson, executive director of the Carmel Business Association.

Jepson said she cannot offer hard numbers, but she has gotten strong anecdotal information from her many sources in the village.

"I've heard from some innkeepers and business people that we have seen a very positive effect," Jepson said.

She said many visitors are quite open about telling people they were attracted to the area by what they saw on T.V. An estimated five million viewers tuned in to the broadcast, aired Tuesday, Nov. 9. The taping took place during the two days before airing.

The entire week, Nov. 8-12, spotlighted California. An episode broadcast from Big Sur was aired that Monday.

Also that day, the weather cooperated as hundreds of Carmel residents flocked to Carmel beach to watch the spectacle. Good Morning America hosts Charles Gibson and Joan Lunden interviewed Leon Panetta, Clint Eastwood and other prominent locals on a make-shift stage. One and all spoke of Carmel and the Monterey Peninsula in only glowing terms.

The effects of the program are hard to gauge, "but we expect to reap most of the benefits next spring and summer," said Rick Lawrance, executive vice president of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce and Visitors and Convention Bureau.

Lawrance noted there have been many telephone calls to the bureau from people whose interest was peaked by what they saw on television. Others, of course, don't mention the program, even though it may have been the reason for their interest.

"You can never tell what message will win people over," he said. "Someone could see the broadcast, not do anything — and then it will be an article in The New York Times that persuades them to come."

Picketing aside, Pine Inn's business is 'normal'

By SUSAN BECK

IT HAS been four weeks since Marriott Management Services took over the dining room facilities at the historic Pine Inn Hotel in Carmel, and despite the change, business is normal for this time of year, according to the property's general manager.

"This is the slow time of year, but business is okay," said general manager John Wilson, who added that not as many local people are coming to the Pine Inn's bar during happy hour.

The decline in local attendance at the Pine Inn's bar may or may not be attributed to the daily picket line in front of the 104-year-old establishment, Wilson noted.

When Marriott took over the Pine Inn's restaurant and bar on Nov. 8, they chose not to rehire 35 employees, some of whom worked there for up to 37 years.

'This is the slow time of year, but business is okay... The morale among the current employees is still down.'

—John Wilson

The longtime employees are members of the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees Union, Local 483, which organized a boycott intended to last as long as possible.

"The morale among the current employees is still down," Wilson observed. "It's sad when everyone sees their friends standing outside in the picket line."

Grant Hopkins, food and beverage director for Marriott at the Pine Inn, said several local residents continued to dine at the Inn's restaurant despite the boycott. "I'd say there is some pressure from the picketing." But, he added, "We are getting several more residents in all the time."

Business was exceptionally good on Thanksgiving day, Hopkins noted. "We've had a very good response to the change overall."

Leonard O'Neill, chief executive officer for Local 483, said the boycott is, "going very good from a union perspective. We've had an effect on their business. I know many banquets and parties

'We turn away people daily on the sidewalk. And the locals have been loyal in staying away.'

—Leonard O'Neill

have been cancelled."

Thirteen employees who were rehired by Marriott have indicated business is down substantially, O'Neill said, adding four of those rehired have quit because there was not enough business or they didn't like the new managers.

"We turn away people daily on the sidewalk," O'Neill said. "And the locals have been loyal in staying away. Several local residents come by daily with coffee and donuts to support the boycott."

Wilson said the picket line is not a problem for the Pine Inn. "We are working with the new management," he noted. "Things seem to be going smoothly."

RSC head calls conference with county 'rewarding'

■ Holland, Gray air differing opinions over confidentiality disclaimer on preapplication

By SUSAN BECK

A PRIVATE preapplication plan conference between county agencies and representatives from Rancho San Carlos last Wednesday was highly successful, according to Tom Gray, managing partner for the 20,000-acre ranch in Carmel Valley.

The conference was "very rewarding," added Gray, despite county counsel's denial last week to accept preapplication plans submitted to the Monterey County Planning and Building Inspection Department for review.

County Counsel Doug Holland denied a request by attorney Brian Finegan, representing Rancho San Carlos, to abide by a confidentiality disclaimer for the preapplication maps and documents. The documents are an inside look at a proposed development project for the ranch including 350 homes, a 150-room hotel and commercial and recreational areas.

Holland stated last week that all documents submitted to county planning stay in the files and are available for public review.

This week, Gray pointed out, "It was never our intention to leave the documents with the county. We were going to pick them up after the preapplication conference.

"We asked to take the documents back early. Fortunately, everyone was able to have a chance to review them before the meeting, which helped them to help us."

About the confidentiality disclaimer notice, Gray explained it was his understanding county counsel agreed to adhere to the request from the time the documents were submitted to county planning.

"A call was made to county counsel asking if they would accept the preapplication package with the disclaimer," Gray recalled. "County counsel agreed to it."

In fact, Gray added, a confidentiality disclaimer has been on every Rancho San Carlos document shared with the county for at least the past two years.

"This was nothing new," he said. "We didn't all of a sudden change our procedure. It was never a question until the preapplication package was submitted."

Holland countered by explaining county counsel never agreed a disclaimer was an option for exemption under the California Public Records Act.

"This is the first document I've ever seen from Rancho San Carlos with this language on it," Holland said. "That's not to say it hasn't been on a document. But I don't recall every seeing it."

However, Holland remembered the phone call from county planning about the Rancho San Carlos preapplication documents. "Another attorney took the call," he recalled. "To my recollection, the question was, 'Is this stuff protected or is it a public record.'"

The attorney was in a hurried mode, said Holland. He told the caller from the planning department this situation hadn't come up before. "He said," recalled Holland, "We don't have to worry about that now. Only if someone makes a request to look at the preapplication documents."

Formal applications plans for the Rancho San Carlos development project are expected to be submitted to county planning by January 1994, according to Gray.

Backyard burn season underway; caution urged

THE ANNUAL backyard burn season started Wednesday in Monterey County, and runs through the end of April 1994.

Residents can only burn clean dry brush and yard trimmings at one- and two-family dwellings, and burning is only allowed on permissible burn days.

Before burning, residents are asked to check the daily burn day status by calling 1-800-225-BURN. The burn line is updated daily at 4 p.m. with information about the next day's burn status.

In addition, residents must check with their local fire department, which may have additional regulations and time restrictions.

Carmel-by-the-Sea is one of the cities where burning is prohibited.

"This (the commission's vote) was the first time we have had some firm direction," said Linda Smith, who is active with the citizens' group Friends of Pescadero Canyon, which advocates finding a means to acquire the land. "Our feeling is that if there is a will there is a way, but until now there hasn't been a will."

Smith said the group would help in any way it can.

Supes agree to 'decriminalize' parking violations in county

IT MAY be criminal to find an unwanted parking ticket on the windshield of your car. But, at least, it's no longer a criminal offense when it happens.

Carmel, along with other Monterey County cities, have established non-criminal procedures for handling parking tickets in response to a state law enacted July 1.

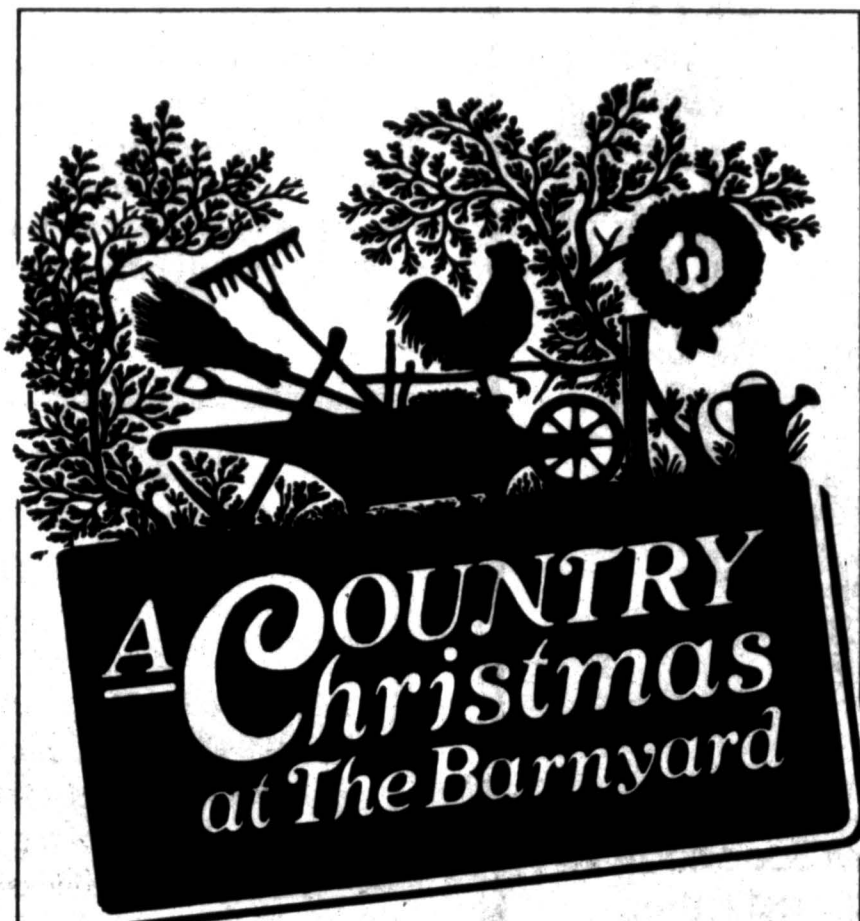

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors agreed Tuesday to "decriminalize" parking violations, allowing them to be processed through the county's administrative office rather than through the courts.

About 2,000 parking tickets are issued every year in the unincorporated areas of Monterey County. Now, rather than appealing to a judge, a motorist disputing a parking ticket will be given an administrative review.

If the dispute remains unresolved, the Conflict Resolution and Mediation Center will conduct a hearing for $1. A $25 filing fee will be imposed if a motorist wants to appeal to municipal court for an additional hearing.

Property owners want to know specifically what they can do with their property, and how they will be compensated for what they cannot do. Ironically, city officials want to know the same thing.

Kersnar said the bleakest scenario would be the city having to sell off other municipal assets to compensate property owners. All the brainstorming now is an attempt to avoid that prospect.

City forester asks commissioners to take action on pine tree disease

Kelly posed a series of questions for commissioners:

- "Given the fact that we may lose a large number of pines, what action is necessary to develop a program to ensure the forested character of our city?"
- "The experts recommend we do not plant pines. What other species of trees should be planted?"
- "Should the annual pine seedling giveaway take place on March 7, 1994?"
- "We do not have the resources to continually prune infected limbs, nor has this been effective in curtailing the spread of the disease. At what point do we remove infected trees?"

• "What should the policy be regarding infected trees on private property? Should the current standards apply when considering applications for removal?"

• "At this time, it appears that our best opportunity for ensuring the health of our pine forest is through the development of pines that are resistant to pitch canker. What can the Forest and Beach Commission do to help or hasten this process?"

Congressman keeping busy in D.C.

House approves Farr-sponsored campaign reform bill

WITH REP. Sam Farr, D-Carmel as one of its sponsors, a campaign finance reform bill won House approval Sunday, Nov. 12.

With the pre-Thanksgiving rush upon it, Congress passed the legislation 255-175. If signed by President Clinton, the bill would establish a $200,000 limit on political action committee donations and a voluntary spending cap of $600,000.

"They (the American people) told us they wanted campaign finance reform enacted in the Congress," Farr declared. "My support fulfills a campaign theme and goal to help pass the most comprehensive campaign finance reform legislation."

The measure would prohibit campaign abuses via corporations, trade associations, partnerships and lobbyists. Also, the reforms would bolster reporting requirements and increase the authority of the Federal Election Commission.

After the vote, Farr stated, "This institution decided today to clean up its act and approve positive campaign finance reform for the benefit of the democratic process and the American electorate."

The Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act of 1993 was opposed by Democrats, who complained it did not go far enough, and by backers of a Republican alternative.

Living gifts

SOME ADVICE bears repeating and since it's never too early to talk about giving pets as holiday gifts, here I go!

Although the thought of surprising someone special with a four-legged friend seems like a terrific idea, the holidays are a particularly difficult time to introduce a new pet into a household. All of the things we love about this season — the visitors, the tree with its sparkling lights and shiny ornaments, the excitement and commotion — can be very confusing and frightening to a little newcomer.

If you decide to give someone the gift of a new pet, why not give them the gift of choosing it as well? How about presenting a gift certificate from your favorite pet supply store? Make your own greeting card with a verse you've written about your idea. Or buy some of the items the new pet will need — like bowls, food, brushes, toys, or a cozy bed — and wrap them as gifts along with your "note of intent."

Choosing a pet is an important decision and a very personal one, so let the owner-to-be select just the right pet at just the right time — when the holiday commotion is over.

CHS students paint mural to cover safety fencing

CARMEL HIGH School students are doing something to improve the appearance of their fire-damaged campus.

Students have fastened sheets of plywood to the chain-link safety fencing that surrounds the gutted science wing and are painting a mural on it. While there is little continuity displayed in the works, the messages are generally upbeat.

Rafael Perez (above right), a junior, is shown working on a panel with a Mexican-American theme. He said he hopes it will be representative of both cultures and send a positive message of tolerance to his fellow students.

— By Scott Brearton

Police issue warning about auto burglaries

CARMEL POLICE are warning residents to keep their vehicles locked and valuables out of sight.

According to Carmel Police Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras, there were eight auto burglaries and thefts from unlocked vehicles within the city limits last month.

Items taken ranged from clothing to stereo equipment, Poitras said, warning citizens to be aware of suspicious noises or individuals.

"If you have valuables and you must leave them in your car, put them in your trunk," Poitras said. "Don't leave them visible."

Aquarium program returns otter pups to wild

frequent nursing and grooming – in order to survive. When a pup is brought to the aquarium, members of the “husbandry” staff and volunteer “otter-sitters” step in as surrogate mothers, providing the same around-the-clock care.

Pups are fed a liquid formula of clams, squid, half-and-half, fish oil, fluids, vitamins and minerals. Their fur is groomed to keep it clean and fluffy.

Maternal bond

Volunteers and paid staff also try to establish a maternal bond with the pup. When the pup’s health is stabilized, surrogate mothers take it on supervised swims in the aquarium’s Great Tide Pool and in Monterey Bay.

There, they present live food and model behaviors the pup would see in the wild. They swim, dive for food and crack open shellfish on their chests with a rock.

By mimicking the normal behaviors of wild adult otters, the staff tries to teach the pup to forage on its own and survive without human aid.

In preparation for release, a radio transmitter is surgically implanted in the pup’s abdomen, and it is isolated from human contact to break its bond with people.

Pups are then returned to Monterey Bay.

As of August 1993, 15 otters rescued as pups (12 weeks old or younger) have been returned to the wild. Of those, four survived, three were recaptured and five died; the status of three is still unknown.

By comparison, 15 animals older than 12 weeks old were returned to their native habitat. Of those, eight survived, three died and the status of four is unknown.

Freebies, cheapies, warm fuzzies for holiday season

THE FLIP side to the joy of the holidays is that some older residents are away from or estranged from families or have no close kin. They may be on tight budgets, which only serves to accentuate their feelings of being left out.

Getting involved with events, volunteering or donating can give you that warm, fuzzy feeling and help chase away the blues. Join us as we look about for free, almost free and reasonably priced celebrations and opportunities to give.

HEARING FACT NO. 2

If your hearing is less than normal, then you're pretty normal.

Eighteen million other Americans have the same problem.
More persons suffer with loss of hearing than from diabetes, high blood pressure and arthritis combined! So although you are special, your difficulty is not.
Make sure your Family Practice Physician knows about your hearing loss - however minor you may think it is. Most people can be helped through surgery, medicine or hearing aids.

If medicine or surgery is not your answer, you may benefit from a hearing aid.

Golden Bough could inject life into Carmel's performing arts scene

Transamerica Corp.

The large main stage, in particular, would add to the options of many performing arts enterprises, Moorers said. "It would round out the performing arts center that Carmel has been throughout its history."

Two stages

The main theater upstairs — currently the cinema — is large enough to fly scenery and seat an audience of 300; it is an excellent venue for large productions, both music and drama, according to Moorers.

Meanwhile, as the 100-seat circle theater downstairs has been relegated in recent years to storage and rehearsal space, "it would be perfect for contemporary and more experimental works," Moorers said.

The new Golden Bough would be a fallback full-size facility during the period when Sunset Center is likely to undergo a major renovation. That $11 million project could leave the city facility out of operation for a full season.

The improvements at Golden Bough, however, should take only "two to three months," Moorers said. Thus, GroveMont's new two-stage home should be ready by spring of next year.

"I am looking forward to this," said Hovick. "I believe we should attract people to Carmel, not just for the ice cream or shopping for T-shirts, but for live theater."

By JAMES GENONE

Friends lend helping hand — when it's needed most

IT SEEMS every so often life gets really tough. Things start to slowly pile up, then suddenly, like a chain reaction, everything goes wrong. Before you know it, you feel like the entire world is sitting on your shoulders.

Everyone goes through this sort of thing, no matter how young or old, but we seldom get a chance to reflect on these hard times. Personally, I feel the need every once and a while to step back when things go wrong and assess my life.

I can think of a few times over the past few years when life has become real tough. It usually starts out with having too much to do. I get behind in my homework, and then before I know it I've bombed a quiz. Then I get upset and stressed out, so I become irritable. That's when I start fighting with my friends, or my family.

Maybe I get in a big argument and hurt some one's feelings. At this point, things have usually started to look pretty bad. My work is piling up, my grades are going down, and my friends and family hate me because I'm grouchy and constantly in a bad mood.

Time for a breather

A timeout is in order. You know, take a deep breath and count to 10 or something.

Actually, counting to 10 has never really done it for me. I usually need to find a way to sort things out. Sometimes, I'll just plow straight into the pile of work until it gets done. Other times I need a total break. Maybe I go camping, or spend a quiet day reading and playing my guitar at home.

I have a lot of different ways to relax, but when I really think about it, my friends are what get me through these hard times.

Last week, I was feeling stressed out going into the Thanksgiving holiday. I took time off to relax, but that didn't help. I wasn't really sure how to ease the tension until a friend offered to go to the beach to surf and boogie-board.

We spent about an hour there, and then went to a movie with another buddy. Later that evening, we had a nutritious and amusing dinner at Denny's, then drove to Watsonville to watch a basketball game.

Although I didn't realize it at the time, this was exactly what I needed. Sometimes just hanging out and goofing around with a couple of friends can really make a difference. It had been so long since I had spent any time doing that, I had forgotten what it was like.

The next day, I needed to catch up on my calculus, so I went over to another friend's house to get some help. Not only did I figure out the math, I also got the opportunity to talk to this person about a lot of my problems. Once again, it didn't occur to me at the time, but having someone there to listen and sympathize was more helpful than I could have imagined.

Friendship is a funny thing. When times are good, we take it for granted. But when things get rough, we hope and pray that someone is around to lend a helping hand. I know that I don't always let my friends know how much I appreciate them, and I'm sure most other people fail to do the same.

Next time things go wrong, and your friends come and bail you out, remember how important they are. Try to be there for them when they need your support.

The world we live in is often hard to deal with, but it certainly makes it a lot easier if you don't have to face it alone.

Two CHS graduates named Advanced Placement Scholars

JASON LINDGREN and Matthew Travaille, both Carmel High School graduates, have been named AP Scholars by the College Board for their performance on college-level Advanced Placement (AP) Examinations.

According to CHS officials, only about 11 percent of the 424,000 students who took the exams in May 1993 scored high enough to merit such recognition. Lindgren and Travaille qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP Exams with grades of three or higher.

Lindgren attends the University of California at Berkeley and Travaille attends UC Santa Barbara.

AP Examinations, which students take in May after completing college-level courses at their high school, are graded on a scale of one to five, with five being the highest possible score.

Farr joins colleagues to back clinic access

In other news involving the congressman, Farr joined his House colleagues in support of the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act.

The legislation, passed by voice vote, would apply federal criminal penalties to those convicted of using force to "injure, intimidate or interfere" with clients of reproductive health services.

"If a woman cannot privately, freely and safely choose abortion, she is being denied her Constitutional right," Farr said. "We need this law in order to send a clear message to the American people that shootings, arson and vandalism are neither appropriate nor legitimate means of expressing political and moral differences."

Farr speaks in Monterey today

With the House on vacation, Rep. Sam Farr will spend the recess in his 17th District and participate in a couple of events that will keep him in the limelight.

• Today from 12:45 to 1:15 p.m., at the Doubletree Hotel in Monterey, Farr will deliver the keynote luncheon address and will focus on local issues and the topic of Fort Ord's conversion.

• From 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturday, Farr will host a health care reform forum at Cabrillo College in Santa Cruz. The event will be held at the Forum Building, Room 450.

On my honor, I swear

"ON MY honor I will do my best to do my duty to God and my country and to obey the Scout Law; to help other people at all times; to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight."

That's the scout oath and promise, remember? Not only that, you have to be "trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean and reverent."

My table partners and I quizzed ourselves on these qualities during the Eleventh Annual Auction for the Monterey Bay Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America at the Monterey Marriott Hotel Saturday evening. And we failed miserably. My shopping addiction eliminates "thrifty," and "cheerful?" Sometimes. But "obedient," well that's going too far...

Let me tell you about my brief and brilliant career in the Brownies. I vaguely remember being kicked out for insouciance. I simply didn't take the rules and regulations seriously enough. I'm too right brained. Marching, pledging, saluting, doing things in groups go against my independent grain.

I did like the uniform, though. In fact, when I discovered it among the mothballs this year, I decided to save it to prove that I really was that small once. The little brown felt beanie really gets me.

Actually, this insouciance carried through school, where, in kindergarten, on a blustery Minnesota day, I was sent to stare at the cases of books in the library for shaking my wet hands and splashing the bathroom mirrors.

I've never forgotten that heinous punishment. It scarred my psych permanently.

I could say I went on to a life of crime and drugs, but I didn't. Instead, I continued following my artistic bent and rebelling against regimentation at every curve.

It's taken me half a life to appreciate the need to belong to groups. And I had to agree with Carmel born Mike Aldrete, famed baseball player with the Oakland A's, when he said, "We could take a page from the scouts and apply it to our lives."

Aldrete reminisces

During social hour (actually, two hours), while 300 some guests examined hundreds of silent auction items, from blood pressure monitors to a piano, Aldrete had to strain his brain a little to remember what scouts had done for him. "I never made it to Eagle Scouts," he said. "I got involved with athletics and girls."

But he did remember how important he and the boys on the block felt wearing their uniforms and scarves. And, judging from his life, his scout values continue on. He and his wife, Gina, love camping. And among the plethora of charitable requests they receive daily, they are participating in Project Santa, wherein they adopt a family at Christmas and buy them gifts.

"Gina had a great time shopping for the kids. She went overboard," he said.

"You don't realize how needy they are," Gina said. "When we went over last year with the tree and gifts, the kids were so excited. It was a dream come true. You just can't do enough."

In fact, they went back home and returned to the family with a second load of gifts.

During the live auction, Aldrete said, "I was a little tentative about giving a speech. I figured the 'be prepared' theme had been run into the ground and I wanted to leave the sex ed' one aside."

He said he examined whether his scouting experience has carried over to his life and was "pleasantly surprised" to find it has.

"I was looking through the handbooks I dug up from my mom's garage and the steps it requires to be an Eagle Scout." He then recounted what could have been an ego deflating experience with a reporter in the locker room during a Giants game. "You're short, slow and weak. What are you doing here?" the man asked.

Scouts ideology saved the day. "The key is to be realistic and set an attainable goal," Aldrete said. His was going to make it to the major leagues and no nasty reporter was going to stop him.

It was a trip down memory lane at the gala. Boy scouts were stationed about, including Robbie Powell, Troop 80, age 13, who said he likes camping.

JACK RITCHY, president of the Monterey Bay Area Council, posed in front of familiar paraphernalia with Dan Lucas, first vice president and chairman of the auction.

STEVE ROYSTER, scouts executive director, and John Laughton, auction vice chairman, are seen with Eastwood's $4,000 boots, worn in his movie "Unforgiven."

MIGUEL DOMINGUEZ, artist of the exceptional painting, "Morning Fire," poses here with Bob Evans, vice president of special projects. The painting was used for the cover of the auction program.

DAVID GREEN, vice president for finance, got together with BSA council staff people Dotty Crafton, administrative assistant; Jesus Lopez, Hispanic Outreach; and Jack Daly, Mount Toro district executive.

ROY MUEHLBERGER of Santa Barbara had a 30-year reunion with former Monterey scout members Tom Minnis (left) of Sunnyvale and Bill Rosenoff of Santa Cruz.

There were no "hello mudda, hello fadda" types here. Even Dan Lucas, chairman of the event, said his scouting experiences in Minnesota were fun and he liked the comradery.

Ah, yes. Camping. Vague nightmarish scenes returned to me: YMCA camp in the Sierras. Furtive postcards home: "SOS! I've been taken prisoner in a shack with no indoor plumbing. They make me ride a broken down Strawberry roan that bucks and runs back to the barn. I hate the dirty ground. And I'm becoming a blimp from cafeteria food."

Give me satin sheets and breakfast in bed at the Marriott instead.

Bonnie Marquardt recounted her girl scout campout in Japan. It was her first such experience and they pitched the tent on lower grounds just in time for a rain storm.

That made me feel better. Not to mention, Deputy Sheriff Billy Plank said his Idaho troop tipped their canoe over and all six of them swam for their lives.

Leonard Salinas and Amanda Luna, both Explorers, monitored a table display of arm patches. They expressed high hopes that they will be employed in the law enforcement field one day.

Meanwhile, Malcolm Sagenkahn sat at a piano for bid, playing the song he composed, hoping to convince his friend to buy the piano.

I was impressed with this affair. Silent auction items were functional, the tasty buffet was functional, with two stations at either side of the room, and the committee picked a day when there wasn't another event competing for the time.

Clint's boots

And the live auction was a gas! Greg Cole zeroed in on bidders relentlessly. Clint Eastwood's signed boots from "Unforgiven" went for $4,000, after an anonymous caller from Los Angeles kept bidding the price up over the phone. The crowd went wild when local Gordon Rubbo placed the winning bid. I went to his chair and asked his wife if she was going to kill him later. Lynda said no, that they would frame them and "hang 'em high" for all to see.

Rod Hudson's '85 Jag' sold for $7,000.

And a handsome price was paid for "Morning Fire," a painting done especially for the event by Miguel Dominguez.

Dominguez, a former scout in Gonzales, said he believes in the scouts, as did most of the crowd there. Their programs are expanding and include outreach to the Hispanic community to encourage group participation versus gang membership.

Good idea!

Carmel man takes to chilly ocean in attempt to flee police

RESCUE from page 1

Meanwhile, O'Donovan and Rabaut had already called for assistance from the Monterey County Sheriff's Department. Three deputies, three Pebble Beach Co. security guards, and three officers had surrounded Deas on the beach, according to O'Donovan.

The man was dressed in nothing but a pair of blue jeans when he jumped into the ocean at the base of Fourth Avenue, according to police.

Full coastal incident response
A full coastal incident response was requested by Carmel police at 8:38 a.m.,

according to Carmel Fire Department Battalion Chief John Trenner.

"He was about 200 yards out in the water when I got to the scene," Trenner said.

In an impressive display of emergency response readiness, a total of five other agencies responded to the call, including California State Parks, Carmel Highlands Fire Department, Monterey County Sheriff's Department Dive Team, U.S. Coast Guard and Pacific Grove Marine Rescue.

Additionally, a Coast Guard rescue helicopter was dispatched from San Francisco, according to Trenner.

Trenner said two Zodiac inflatable boats manned by personnel from State Parks, Pacific Grove Marine Rescue and Carmel Highlands Fire Department were the first to approach Deas, who was treading water nearly three-fourths of one mile from shore by then.

"That's when he refused to take any type of flotation device," Trenner said.

"He didn't want to be rescued."

At one point, Trenner said Deas threatened to puncture the inflatable boat if personnel attempted to put him on board. According to Trenner, they were advised to "back off and keep negotiating with the individual."

'A waiting game'

"I didn't want anybody approaching the suspect until he was willing to be approached," Trenner said, characterizing the standoff as a "waiting game."

John DiCarlo, a member of the sheriff's department dive team, said Deas swam away every time the Zodiacs approached him, and "threatened to go underneath the prop of the boat and kill himself."

"He said we weren't going to take him (alive)," DiCarlo said.

Ninety minutes later, negotiators managed to convince him to give up, according to police.

CARMEL POLICE Reserve Officer Tim Meroney (right) escorts Roderick Deas off the dock at Stillwater cove following a 90-minute standoff. Deas attempted to evade police by jumping into the ocean Friday morning.

'Biggest concern was saving him from drowning'

"We decided to wait it out," DiCarlo said. "Time was on our side. We waited until he tired himself out to the point where he decided to give himself up."

Deas was pulled aboard a 41-foot Coast Guard rescue boat, handcuffed and transported to Stillwater Cove, where an ambulance was waiting.

"As cold as that ocean is, hypothermia was going to set in," Trenner said. "He had to be in pretty good condition to stay in the ocean that long."

"It was a good coordinated effort from all the agencies involved," Trenner added. "I'm just happy everyone made it in safely."

Carmel Police Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras agreed:

"Our biggest concern was saving this guy from drowning. It's very unusual that someone could last that long in that low a temperature."

According to Dr. Takashi Hattori, a senior radiologist at Community Hospital, 90 minutes is about the maximum length of time a person can spend in Monterey Bay waters. He said water temperature, clothing and the amount of energy exerted were significant determining factors.

"In water under 77 degrees Fahrenheit, it's better to keep quiet than to struggle," Hattori said. "You can't generate enough heat to compensate for what the water takes away."

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

America's crafts heritage is thriving, thanks largely to older men and women who independently turn out distinctive handiwork ranging from quilts to toys and unique household items. To encourage and advise older people in making and selling fine handicrafts, The Elder Craftsmen Inc. was set up in 1955 as a not-for-profit organization. Based in New York at 135 E. 65th Street, Elder Craftsmen provides training and technical assistance to agencies and community groups serving older adults.

It's been 82 years since a Rye, New York, resident bequeathed her 55-acre estate to found a residence for "respectable gentlewomen." Currently it's home for 142 women, age 68 to 100, most of them in their 80s, in good health and active. Now they've welcomed Robert Martin, the first man admitted since the board of directors won court approval to waive the women-only policy. Martin, 85, a retired book editor, was no stranger at the residence. He had served 14 years as a volunteer there. How do the 142 "gentlewomen" react to his presence? "Stanley blends right in," says one. "He's very learned and refined." She reported some talk that "we should call him Adam — the first man."

Proposal for First Murphy House: How about an annex to City Hall?

IT APPEARS that the First Murphy House, situated on the corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue, has accomplished only one of its two objectives — the preservation of a house dear to Carmelites.

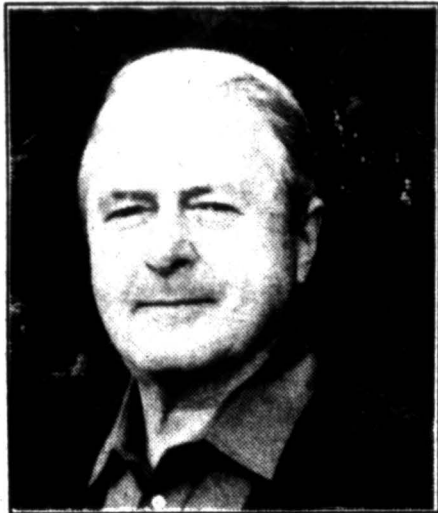

The restoration of a structure built by M.J. Murphy at age 18 for his mother, located between Mission and San Carlos streets, was spared from demolition and moved to its present site by well-meaning Carmelites, myself included.

The original purpose was the preservation of one of Carmel's last remaining legacies from the "Early Days." It would provide a meeting place for Carmelites to have refreshments, play cards, do puzzles and simply enjoy comfort and friendship. This has not happened.

Unlike the Carmel Mission, The Murphy House has failed to attract tourist attention to a house totally meaningless to visitors. It has, however, achieved one of its goals: preservation. Having lived in Carmel since 1928, I respect the responsibilities of maintaining such historic places such as the First Murphy House. But in this case, would it not serve a more meaningful and productive purpose for the residents of Carmel if better used by our city?

This house, sitting on city property, ought to be used to its best advantage and potential.

STANLEY EWIG

Quiet hour for lunch

Located only about two blocks from City Hall, it would provide city employees a quiet hour for lunch. In addition, the deck and adjoining patio could be a typical outdoor Carmel atmosphere where city commission meetings and public hearings would be conducted. Perhaps it could be used for evening public events as well.

In the interest of serving the citizens of Carmel, I respectfully propose that the Murphy House be used to the advantage of city government. In recent years, the Harrison Memorial Library has exhausted its space and in search of properties in which to accommodate the endless demand upon the library's services.

The acquisition of property located on Mission Street and Sixth Avenue, at the time, occupied by the Crocker Bank, was the answer to expanding library facilities and enhancing services.

Much like the proximity of City Hall to the Murphy House, the "Annex", known today as the Park Library, a few blocks from Harrison Memorial, has successfully fulfilled the needs for growth of our library.

Our City Hall, where clerical and administrative operations are conducted, has found it necessary over the years to make many infrastructural changes to serve the residents of Carmel, not to mention the pressure of our business community in downtown Carmel and the millions of visitors they serve as a means of making a living.

Like the Harrison Memorial Library, City Hall needs additional office space in which to function efficiently and to be in a position to accommodate the increasing demands of the future.

I will always cherish the memories of the time I had been a choirboy in the church which is now City Hall, but times change and I think that the citizens of Carmel should accept changes to the benefit of their village.

City Hall 'annex'

The conversation of the First Murphy House to city use would relieve the burden of city officials and employees from working in obsolete facilities and at the same time using modern equipment. Let's be realistic, City Hall needs more space and much like the Library situation, Murphy House could and should be the answer.

My proposal to use the Murphy House as an annex to City Hall would not diminish the hard work of those who "saved" it. Just the opposite, it would prove that our efforts were not in vain and restore purpose for the grand little house on Lincoln Street.

While M.J. Murphy was "everybody's" friend, he and my father remained companions until M.J. retired in Oregon. Because of their friendship, I knew M.J. and suspect that Mike would be honored to know that the house he built for his mother would someday serve all the people of Carmel and future generations of Carmelites.

Personal Perspective

By NOEL VAN BIBBER

Carmel needs its very own museum, because today is tomorrow's history

EVERY TUESDAY my wife and a friend go out to lunch and then spend the afternoon at the Family History Center at the Church of the Latter Day Saints in Seaside. The Genealogy Center is where one can delve into old custom records, census records, ship passenger lists, church records and much more, all in an effort to trace family ancestry.

It is human nature to want to know where we came from; what our ancestors did; when they lived; and all about their ethnic backgrounds. Were some of them leaders? How about politicians, doctors or artists? Were some bank robbers, pirates or military people?

Personal heritage

Each of us today has been molded into the person we are by those who have gone before us. There is a sense of satisfaction to know our history - our personal heritage.

So it is with cities. Since the first Indians settled in our Carmel area, every individual who has lived here has built up the history of Carmel. Each individual has added his heritage to the wonderful tapestry of Carmel history, and it is comforting for a city's residents to know and be frequently reminded of their special history.

Preserve Carmel experience

In view of the above, it is very important that we have an organized commitment to find, record and preserve the Carmel experience. This is done by the collection of print, photographs and the spoken word - the collection of artifacts and preservation of historic architecture. This must be a commitment to also preserve those things of historical importance we do today, because today is tomorrow's history.

What are some of the things we should include under the headline "heritage"?

We should, of course, preserve some of our architecture, such as Murphy House, Flanders Mansion, Tor House and others. We should acquire individual collections of artifacts, art and pictures depicting a special person or segment of our history.

For instance, John Logan has spent 18 years studying the history of Tortilla Flats and has a fine collection of photographs, documents and a detailed verbal history of that segment of our history. We should not lose that.

Our area's history

Another person has a great collection of old milk bottles, alone with the history of the old dairies of our area. We should not lose that.

A friend of mine, a local gardener, has a collection of Indian arrowheads and artifacts he has collected when digging in our Carmel yards. All over the area are bits and pieces of our history that may well be lost. The great stories of Carmel in the minds of the Leidigs, the Klaumanns, the Suttons, and all the other old-timers will be lost when they go. We should not let that happen.

The big problem is those things we do have are scattered all over the city. We need a way to bring all those things together - a place where we residents can see and be reminded often of how we got to where we are today.

We need a museum - a place for us old-timers to remember and a place for the newcomers to find comfort in the heritage of their new home.

Vision and tradition: Reflecting on Carmel-by-the-Sea's past

"AMERICANS ARE a peculiar people. They cannot read the writing on the wall until their backs are up against it." That lament — and warning — came from Adlai Stevenson in the midst of one of his political campaigns.

As we citizens of Carmel-by-the-Sea look to our next election in April 1994 (when we will select our mayor and two council members), we should be thankful through the decades since incorporation in 1916 there have been citizen organizations that did see the writing on the wall.

What these groups of residents accomplished prevented the kind of development and "progress" that have caused regrets and despair in other communities that now realize they have lost, little by little, election by election, the values and assets once shared by residents and merchants alike.

Reflecting on this record of citizen involvement and leadership, Harold Gilliam, in his acclaimed book Creating Carmel, wrote: "Probably nowhere else so early and with such vigor have residents fought for the preservation of their community... The generations-long struggle to maintain a sanctuary from bulldozers of 'progress' ... is both a unique phenomenon and a microcosm of some of the conflicts taking place in other American communities as the 20th century draws to a close."

Subject of ridicule

When we consider the record of those who carried on that "generations-long struggle," we may well be surprised that their foresight was ridiculed and bitterly opposed. What they sought to prevent or to achieve now seems eminently sensible and necessary! Should we not take note and attend to our own need for foresight, even vision?

Consider an example in 1922 when it became known that a resort hotel was being planned for the beach at the foot of Ocean Avenue. It took the efforts of a citizens' group known as The Committee of 40 to pressure the city government to purchase the dunes and beach and thus save Carmel beach from the commercial exploitation that has afflicted every other beach adjacent to an urban area.

Similarly, in 1938, it was the election of three councilmen identified as representing "the art element" that produced an ordinance to prohibit continuance of cars parking between the trees down the middle of Ocean Avenue. Following angry accusations and a court fight, this reform prevailed, thereby creating the stone walls and tall trees and landscaping that grace Ocean Avenue today.

Arousing opposition

Through the decades, foresight has aroused opposition: When prohibition of billboards, outdoor electric signs and displays overhanging sidewalks was achieved; when motel owners were required to provide off-street parking. And in the mid-1950s when a plan was proposed to close Ocean Avenue to automobiles, to create a European-style promenade with sidewalk cafes and elegant shops. This vision was judged by its opponents as too drastic. Defeated, the concept might well be wished for by everyone today when it is too late.

Less visionary, more obviously practical but nonetheless opposed with vehemence was the plan to prevent the "motelization" of Carmel. This effort in 1959 was led by Mayor Gunnar Norberg when 30 hostels seemed ample. This most controversial of our mayors succeeded, but he failed in his many-year effort to prevent construction of the Carmel Plaza. That commercial development gained approval with the strong support of Mayor Barney Laiolo, who later failed when citizen outrage thwarted his plan to convert our famed Forest Theatre into a parking area for city-owned vehicles.

A move to organize

So it has been, decade by decade, election by election — residents (and, too, far-sighted business people!) organizing to protect their village from plans that would shape the future, that would bring more cars, more buses, more intensified development in commercial and residential areas. Less and less Carmel-by-the-Sea.

That concern, that reading the writing on the wall, has motivated residents to organize, from the Committee of 40 through the effort known as Old Carmel to the Northeast Neighbors Association and the Carmel Residents Association of the 1980s.

These altruistic organizations have promoted long-term values vs. short-term gains and thereby have slowed and constrained the forces of development and commercialization. They have sought to fulfill Robinson Jeffers' admonition — that we should strive "to keep Carmel tolerably simple, quiet and tree-protected, in spite of 'progress.'" And why ignore Jeffers or our other literary heroes who have been so vital to the image of this place? We seek to exploit their fame, why not value their vision?

Essential characteristic

Thinking of our town's image, bur-nished by so many writers and artists, we should not forget that the essential characteristic of Carmel-by-the-Sea in this last decade of the 20th century is our powerful tradition of residents engaged in lively debate with commercial interests.

What is it about our small community with its large public image that commands most attention? It is our history of being controversial. How many times have we all heard people express their amusement or surprise (and admiration) at our town's debates, disputes and introspective struggles? Our seeking to define ourselves. We are known as a place of cranks and ardent reformers. Good for us!

How else would we have held back the great American entrepreneurial forces that, when unconstrained, have inadvertently denigrated the natural beauty and charm of towns from Cape Cod to Miami, from Seattle to San Diego and a thousand once-lovely places in between?

Beginning in 1987, that robust tradition was reinvigorated by the founding of two new resident-oriented organizations. They read the writing on the wall and what they saw roused them to awaken citizens to their duties.

Petition drive prevails

In 1987, the Northeast Neighbors Association mounted a petition drive that revealed the extent of opposition to development of a high-density apartment-condominium complex at the site of the Hayward Lumber Company. Foreseeing what such a big-city structure would do to our town, the Northeast Neighbors and their allies battled the development interests — and prevailed.

As we admire Vista Lobos Park today (on the site of the old Hayward Lumber yard), we should recall what would be looming over us from that elevation if the Northeast Neighbors had not foreseen the danger.

It was also during Mayor Clint Eastwood's administration (1986-87) that another group of residents realized the dangers facing Carmel-by-the-Sea, when the only voice on the City Council raised to defend residential interests was that of Jim Wright.

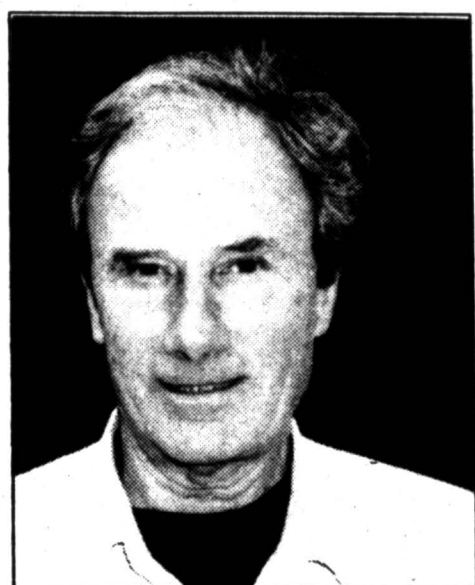

In April 1987, the Carmel Residents Association was founded and one of its first engagements involved organizing opposition to the proposed sale of parts of Mission Trails Park, including Flanders Mansion. The scheme was defeated, thereby preserving one of our most vital natural assets — a buffer against the inexorable pressures of outside development.

'Zone of influence'

With its membership of 546 residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea and its immediate "zone of influence" (including business owners), the CRA has taken the lead not only in political campaigns but as well in civic/social activities designed to heighten citizen awareness and participation.

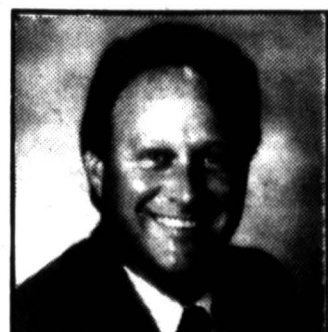

One of the most prominent of these civic programs has been the Carmel playwright, imagining a "readers theater or artists' cafe, a creative nerve center of sorts.

Brainstorming

Chaired by Carmel Councilwoman Barbara Brooks, the meeting was intended as a brainstorming session, removed from practical constraints. Nevertheless, practical questions about how the coffee house abounded.

Would the city or a private franchise run it? What are the zoning implications? Can food service and historic preservation coexist? What happens to all the delicate furniture? Could a coffee house survive?

Nevertheless, the vision persists. One speaker was Ben Lyon, a longtime friend of Walton's, who went so far as to place a half-page ad in a local weekly, urging support for a "Carmel clubhouse," and mentioning Sancho Panza as a model.

And then others spoke wistfully of El Esperanto, a short-lived cafe located in the basement of Sunset Center during the early 1970s.

The packed council chambers Tuesday proved one thing: Whether or not First Murphy becomes the location for a cafe, a brand-new need appears in evidence. Committee member Laurie Schumann may have put it best just as the meeting was wrapping up: "We could always start another committee to look into developing a coffee house."

Beach Cleanup, which involves scores of volunteers who scour the beach to remove debris and charcoal at a time when city resources are limited and beach maintenance is not up to standards.

Recently our beach was featured on a major network television program. Good Morning America produced that day's program at the foot of Ocean Avenue and from that site its cameras beamed scenes of our sunny, glowing beach to millions of Americans already shivering and struggling with winter.

Among the Carmel citizens who watched the production while sitting amidst the klieg lights and sound equipment and giant trucks loaded with equipment needed to produce the magic of television, many must have reflected how lucky they are to live in this haven, this village so unlike the many places with wounds and sorrows normally presented each day on TV.

It seemed to me ironic that at that lovely beach location not one of those interviewed or those who served as commentators had a sense of history, a sense of how it came to be that Carmel has such a beach, such a place of beauty uncluttered by a single commercial enterprise. A place so remarkably unlike all other beaches with hotels and piers and snack-bars and life guard towers and a dressing a debris. No one mentioned there is no resort hotel because a group of citizens banded together back in 1922 to stop such an commercial intrusion. No one pointed with pride to the many citizen groups that literally saved Carmel for that morning's promotion.

Since Frank Devendorf founded this place we still call a village, there have been at critical times residents who have sought to prevent the kind of development that has spread like an economic blight up and down our coast.

Carmel-by-the-Sea remains a place to be admired and envied because we have had people who could read the writing on the wall and turn that warning into a battle cry that rallies support and altruistic endeavor.

BASKETBALL PREVIEW: RLS BOYS

Pirates hope experience, depth dictate success

Though still searching for identity, RLS boasts 'good team chemistry' as it looks to make impact in MTAL

By GARTH MERRILL

THE ROBERT Louis Stevenson boys varsity basketball team is searching for its identity.

With practice less than a month old, with players from other sports just suiting up, and with the coach still looking for that winning solution, this month is kind of a shakedown for the Pirates.

"We're still working on shot selection and decision-making," said RLS head coach Bill Hankison. "It should continue through December."

Still, the Pirates have already recognized some strengths that should see them through this season.

"One of our strengths is real good team chemistry," Hankison said. "That's what we've got, and we'll continue to work on it."

Stevenson opened the season with a 63-59 non-league loss Saturday to Santa Cruz High. The Pirates continue preseason play as host of the Coach Wilson Memorial Tournament, which begins this afternoon (see separate story, page 34). RLS will get an early-season look at powerhouse Palma, the lone Mission Trail Athletic League in the eight-team tournament field.

The Pirates were 10-14 last season and failed to appear in post-season play for the first time in six years.

"We were competitive last season," Hankison said. "But we lost some real close games."

Rely on experience

Hankison hopes that experience will translate to coolness under fire this year, as the Pirates return 11 seniors to the lineup.

"I think our depth is really going to help us," predicted Hankison.

Leading the veterans will be senior co-captains Nate

STEVENSON COACH Bill Hankison (center) hopes this season's winning recipe is experience mixed with a dash of youth. Two starters are senior co-captain Nate Williams (left) and sophomore Sean Jackson.

Williams, Chris Watkins and Seth Stout, and seniors Scott Clinton and Sekou Sanyika.

One ingredient Hankison has added to the starting lineup is youth — in the form of 6-4 sophomore Sean Jackson.

"We don't start too many sophomores," Hankison said. "You have to be a pretty exceptional player."

Jackson has a lot of tools that Hankison appreciates. "I really like his court presence more than just about anything," the coach said. "He shoots well, and he's one of our very best rebounders."

Dec. 2-4	C.E. Wilson Memorial Tournament at RLS (Dec. 2) RLS vs. Gilroy 8 p.m.
Dec. 9-11	Scattini Tournament at Palma TBA
Dec. 16-18	Gilroy Tournament TBA

Dec. 29	Seaside 7 p.m.
Dec. 30	Hollister 7 p.m.

(Note: Mission Trail Athletic League season starts Jan. 4, 1994.)

Two other players Hankison expects big things from are senior J.B. Williams and junior Jason Feyock.

Williams is "bigger and stronger" this year, according to Hankison, and should help the Pirates under the net. Feyock, at only 5-11, has shown great early season form and turned in the team's best effort in the Pirates' opening loss to Santa Cruz.

"He's going to get a lot of playing time," Hankison said.

Missing ingredient

One ingredient still missing from the Pirate mix, according to Hankison, is solid team defense.

"I think the key to this team will be its defense," Hankison said.

"Potentially, we have got some real good defensive players. But there is still a long way to go."

Powell paces Carmel to 2-0 start

IF EARLY indications count for anything, the Carmel High Padres boys' basketball team is in for smooth sailing when its floor leader R.J. Powell is sinking opponents like he did in the season's first two games.

Powell, who has signed a letter of intent to attend Pepperdine University next season, is averaging 32 points per game in pacing the Padres to two non-league victories.

Beginning tonight and running through Saturday, the Padres play in the eight-team Monterey Bay Invitational at Monterey Peninsula College. Tonight at 7, the Padres' first-round opponent is Serra.

The lone other local team in the field is Monterey High.

The championship game is slated for 6 p.m. Saturday.

Carmel 62, Watsonville 46

The Padres opened up their season Saturday, Nov. 27 with a convincing 16-point win at Watsonville. After a slow start that saw the Padres fall into early foul trouble, Powell led the charge to blow out a depleted Watsonville unit.

Powell scored 31 points, including an emphatic dunk, quickly showing the fans he deserves to be called the best guard in the state. Showing his versatility, Powell also cleaned up on the boards, grabbing five rebounds in one frenetic sequence.

The Padres' Jason Edwards contributed tough defense and solid rebounding as well as scoring 11 points.

The CHS junior varsity team also got off to a 1-0 start, defeating Watsonville by a score of 53-43. The freshman team completed the sweep with a 56-34 drubbing of the Panthers.

Young's Pirates faced both teams

RLS coach predicts Palma win over Cupertino in CCS grid final

By DOUG THOMPSON

PALMA HIGH will defeat Cupertino Saturday afternoon in San Jose to capture its fifth consecutive Central Coast Section Division IV football championship.

At least that's the prediction from someone who should know — the lone CCS coach who has faced both Palma and Cupertino this season.

"Palma's just too strong," said Jeff Young, head coach at Robert Louis Stevenson. "Palma would win this matchup nine out of 10 times."

In a Mission Trail Athletic League game on Oct. 15, Palma defeated RLS 42-6 in Salinas. On Nov. 19, in the first round of the CCS playoffs, Cupertino turned back the Pirates 34-14 in a game played on the Pioneers' home field.

In what should be somewhat frightening for Cupertino, Palma has breezed its way into Saturday's finale. After dismantling Riordan 64-8 on Nov. 19, the Chieftains crushed Palo Alto 34-0 last Saturday in Gilroy.

Cupertino pulled out a 21-20 win over Archbishop Mitty to gain entry into the championship game.

And while Palma coach Norm Costa says his team and Cupertino are on a par, RLS coach Young believes otherwise.

JEFF YOUNG

"When you add up their experience in the playoffs, their intensity at this time of the year, their personnel and their program, you just have to figure Palma will prevail," Young said. "Cupertino will give them a good game, but Palma's offense is just too much."

IN MEMORY OF 'COACH' WILSON

RLS hosts inaugural hoop tournament

By GARTH MERRILL

ROBERT LOUIS Stevenson School will host the inaugural Coach Wilson Memorial Tournament beginning this afternoon at Pebble Beach.

The three-day tournament honors C.E. Wilson, the RLS chaplain from 1958 until his death last December at the age of 90.

"I've looked forward to honoring Coach Wilson," said RLS head coach and tourney organizer Bill Hankison. "He was a good friend and always good to RLS basketball. Seniors owe him a lot because of the traditions he established here."

The top two teams will play for the championship trophy at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Tickets are available at the door on a daily basis — $4 for adults and $1.50 for students.

Today's first-round matchups

- Seaside vs. M.V. Christian at 3:30 p.m.
- Hollister vs. CA of San Ramon at 5 p.m.
- Palma vs. Pinole Valley at 6:30 p.m.
- RLS vs. Gilroy at 8 p.m.

SCOTT CLINTON (left) and Chris Watkins, two seniors, are expected to add necessary 'balance' and experience to the Pirates' 1993-94 team.

The Pirates got a healthy dose of that defensive attitude this week. As football players traded in cleats for high tops to hit the court, Hankison said he noticed an infusion of aggressive teamwork.

"I think the football players should help the other guys with their spirit," Hankison said.

Among those he expects to make an impact is the Pirates' quarterback, senior Tom Orradre, who is described by Hankison as "tough and really smart."

With players so experienced, and with others full of talent and desire, Hankison doesn't know yet how they will all fit together. But there is one thing of which the coach is certain.

"All of them," he said, "are going to see a lot of playing time."

BEAT THE EDITOR

EVERY WEEK during the football season, Doug Thompson, managing editor of The Carmel Pine Cone, will challenge a guest forecaster in picking the top 10 games from the pro and collegiate slate.

LAST WEEK: After a woeful start — which included two Thanksgiving Day turkeys in Detroit and Dallas — The Editor salvaged a tie with Alan Perlmutter, owner of The River Inn Resort in Big Sur. Alan took a one-game lead into Monday night only to find his hopes resting on the inept Indianapolis Colts, who lost 31-0 to San Diego. The Editor and Alan finished the week with 5-5 records. The Editor is now 6-4-3 on the season.

THIS WEEK: The next challenger is Steve McLennan, executive director of golf operations for Carmel-based TCR Golf. Steve is a 49ers' season ticket holder.

RLS football coach predicts Palma win

Although Cupertino may be able to score against Palma, Young said he believes the Chieftains will score early and often.

"After seeing what Palma has done in the first two rounds of the playoffs," Young said, "it does make the MTAL coaches feel a little better that these teams from the San Jose area are getting the same beating."

The lone team to defeat Palma this season — Milpitas High — is playing Saturday night at San Jose's Spartan Stadium for the CCS Division I title against Leland.

The Palma-Cupertino kickoff is slated for 2 p.m. Saturday at San Jose City College.

In the other CCS games this weekend:

- Monterey Bay League rivals Salinas and Monterey vie for the Division II title at 7 p.m. Saturday at Gilroy High.
- Santa Cruz takes on St. Francis in the Division III finale at 3:30 p.m. at Spartan Stadium.

Cougars from North Monterey County.

Pumped up from the opening tipoff, Carmel scored the first 17 points of the game en route to a 17-point victory. In these first six minutes, the Padres exhibited the type of defense that can take a team to a championship.

"We played defense the way we should in the first quarter, but we need to carry that intensity out for the entire game," said head coach Rich Frank. "We got tired after the first quarter and have to get into better shape."

The Padres were led once again by Powell who scored 33 points. Powell added another dunk in this game, a sight Padre fans are going to see a lot of this season.

Jason Edwards played an excellent game, scoring 17 points and grabbing 10 rebounds. Joey "C.I." Bernhard added 9 points for the Padres, now 2-0.

Girls Basketball

The Padre girls head into their home opener Friday against Seaside with a win and a loss under their belts.

Led by Jenn Rosenthal, who tallied 26 points, the Padres nipped San Lorenzo 41-40 on Nov. 22.

Shannon Dougherty scored 17 points for the CHS junior varsity squad, which fell to SLV, 35-32.

The varsity girls the lost Tuesday to Salinas High.

Soccer

As with many other sports, a team's defense in soccer begins the season with a head start on the offense. This fact was readily apparent in the Padres' 1-0 loss to Seaside on Tuesday, Nov. 23.

The Padres, who relied heavily on the defense of Chris "The Mighty Oak" Bleich played an excellent game against the always-tough Spartans. The game was scoreless until Seaside converted on a goal off a corner kick with just 54 seconds to play.

Cheyenne Stoney-Stevens and Jono Spaulding lead the effort for the Padres, who will be back in action beginning today at the three-day North Salinas Tournament.

Wrestling

With only one senior on this season's squad, the Padres' wrestling team could best be described as young. The loss of Mission Trail Athletic League champion Timber Trotter to graduation hurts the Padres, but he's back as an assistant coach to head coach Pete DeVlaminck.

The Padres are lead by sophomore Toby Lauterbach, who will be competing in the 140-pound weight class. Lauterbach, who worked hard in the off-season and attended wrestling camp during the summer, should be much improved.

Lee Murray also is one to watch for Carmel. Murray will wrestle in the 160-pound weight class. Mike Curry, a transfer from King City, also will help the Padres in the 170-pound class.

Cross-Country

Danielle Wall finished in 44th place in the girls' Division IV CIF state cross-country championships at Fresno on Saturday, Nov. 27.

Wall came in at 20:43; the winning time was 19:04.

PHILIP KUZNICKI

■ Printmaker's creations speak the language of dreams with eloquence, wit

By MOLLY D. WHITEHEAD

THE THEME of communication figures prominently in the work of printmaker Philip Kuznicki, whose recent creations can be seen through Dec. 31 at Wishbone Ltd. in Carmel's Valley Hills Center.

Profile

Kuznicki's hand-colored paper cut prints feature animal imagery that is reminiscent of dream symbolism. The artist remarks, "According to Jungian psychology, we have a collective bank of symbols. Human beings share a language." Yet Kuznicki is well aware that despite our common references, human communication remains a subtle and complex process.

One of the artist's most striking prints, titled "Up Until Now," explores this paradox. The print shows a bird figure seated across the dinner table from his partner.

The table is laden with a fish, a candle, a glass of wine and a decanter. The background is a midnight blue sky with a full yellow moon and a sandy, desert-like ground. Kuznicki characterizes this work as "a love story."

He explains, "The bird man is a little

'UP UNTIL NOW,' a love story, is an example of Kuznicki's most recent narrative work.

drunk, and he's talking to his loved one about what kind of a person he's been up to this point, how he might have mistreated her. They're having dinner together and finally beginning to communicate, which is a difficult thing."

"The table of objects between them represents things that they're working out. The fish, which seems alive because its eye is open, swims back and forth between the two of them like a communication."

The tones of the print are glowing gold, orange and burgundy hues. The minimalist desert landscape focuses the viewer's attention on the interaction between the two figures. Kuznicki comments, "I like desert landscapes because they're quiet. You can imagine a scene onto them."

Another print, called "Only the Shadow Knows," gives off a much darker feeling. A bird man holds a snake in one hand and a rope tied around a small bird's neck in the other.

Looming behind the figure are a hooded shadow and a snarling dog. The limbs of the shadow have the shapes of birds, one of which holds the moon in its beak.

Similarly, the dog's paws look like long necks of geese, each ending in an eye and a beak.

Portmanteau effect

This print, like several others, has the dream-like trait of multiple meanings expressed by a single image. The effect is the visual equivalent of a portmanteau word, one that is a union of two others in both form and meaning—for example, "smog" from "smoke" and "fog."

In this respect, the language of Kuznicki's prints resembles the highly condensed language of the subconscious. Both are charged with wit and humor.

Kuznicki's original orientation toward graphic design makes itself felt in the strong lines and sense of motion in his

'Keepers of the Spirit'

Photographs are stunning testimony to places where 'the echoes of the spirits still dwell'

By KRISTINA S. MEAD

KEEPERS OF the Spirit is a lush and thoughtful book of photographs and short essays depicting parts of the world with a deep connection to spirituality and nature. In a journey that was partly a personal quest for deeper spirituality and partly a wish to document vanishing wisdom, Chris Rainier took the photographs that illuminate the book. The images come from India, New Guinea, Tibet, Ladakh, the Queen Charlotte Islands, Easter Island, Thailand, Burma, Sri Lanka and Cambodia.

The book is beautiful: a pleasure to hold, look at and read. The paper is thick and glossy, the typeface aesthetically pleasing, and the text and photographs exquisitely placed on the page.

CHRIS RAINIER'S photograph of a Yali hunter drinking water in Irian Jaya, a province of Indonesia, is one of the many glorious images in his book, 'Keepers of the Spirit.'

Each of the six sections opens with a short piece by a guest writer, including such luminaries as the Dalai Lama and Oren R. Lyons, faithkeeper of the Six Nations Iroquois Confederacy. Rainier follows with a few pages relating historical information about the area and peoples in question, interspersed with travel anecdotes. Then come a half dozen to 24 full-size, glorious black and white photographs of temples, warriors and worshipers.

That Rainier has been under the tutelage of Ansel Adams is evident from these stunning photographs. The images are carefully composed and show an extremely wide tonal range. Both the details in the shadows and the complexity of the highlights are excellently rendered. Rainier has complete command of his idiom. Some pictures are in crystal-clear focus with the depth of field extending across the entire photograph, while others contain mists, graininess and the blur of moving figures, depending on the desired emotion and how it can most effectively be expressed.

The photographs can be enjoyed by a casual observer, but they also stand up to rigorous scrutiny. Taking time with them often pays off, as new details become apparent. A good example is the picture of a man performing yoga in a river. Inspection of the subtle shadows reveals that he is in full lotus position while floating semi-submerged on his back.

The images are rich and varied: an old man

ANNE ADAMS, Mika Scott, Diana Stork and Teed Rockwell will perform this Saturday at the Fourth Annual Festival of Harps.

Festival of Harps founder talks about upcoming event

By JT MASON

IF YOU thought that the harp was limited to one shape and one style of music, the Festival of Harps will make you think again.

The fourth annual event, co-sponsored by the Welsh Society and KSBW, is coming to Monterey for two performances on Saturday, Dec. 4. The festival will highlight various styles of music including Gaelic harp, concert folk harp, Mexican Jalisco harp and the traditional Classical Pedal harp.

Diana Stork founded the festival four years ago in San Francisco. She was president of the Bay Area Folk Harp Society, the largest and most active chapter of the International Folk Harp Society.

'Magical' response

The festival started out small, with very little paid publicity, yet somehow every performance sold out. Each year Stork booked more shows and larger halls. Again, the performances all sold out. "It quickly became a big event," says Stork. "The spirit and beauty of the harp seemed to just open doors everywhere. It was kind of magical how people

Kuznicki describes art as 'a record of my journey, my walk'

prints. Perhaps more surprising is his exceptionally well-controlled use of vivid watercolor. For this, Kuznicki credits his girlfriend and collaborator, artist Amy Kolman. "When I first started work-strength to balance them. It goes back to the communication of the two sides."

The artist creates his works by a kind of relief printing. First, he cuts shapes out of thick watercolor paper and coats the paper with black ink. Then he runs the paper cut through an etching press, using a heavy roller to press a clean collage cutouts. He soon shifted to "small, traditional paper cuts, just drawing with scissors." Then he moved into making larger, figurative paper cuts in black and white. Only for the past three years has he used color in his work.

Floating figures to stories

Kuznicki's work has evolved conceptually as well as technically. "When I first started cutting, I did square pieces of paper with one or two figures floating, not in a frame. Then I started doing sketches right onto the paper. That was the beginning of the journey toward expressing myself in a more grounded, concrete way. People can relate more to a story than to floating figures."

Given this history, it makes sense that Kuznicki describes his first colored paper cut, "Fata Morgana," in more elementary terms than a recent work such as "Up Until Now," which comprises a fuller narrative. "Fata Morgana" is an illusion in a desert, a mirage of a creature in a sunny gold, leafy suit walking in the desert toward the sun."

The artist grew up in Dunkirk, N.Y., a small town upstate near Buffalo. He studied at Sheridan College of Arts and Technology in Toronto and Villa Maria College in Buffalo.

One snowy day in December, he was watching a news program on television and saw downtown San Francisco, "with people sitting outside and eating their lunches. I thought, 'That looks good,' and decided to move out to California, even though I didn't know anything about the place."

After moving to the Bay Area in 1977,

PHILIP KUZNICKI works on a print at his studio in Berkeley.

Kuznicki attended the Art Institute of San Francisco for a year. He currently lives and works in Berkeley, where he and Kolman maintain a studio in the Strawberry Creek Design Center. Kuznicki has exhibited at many locations in the Bay Area, and his work is in the collections of the Stanford University Library and the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C., among other places.

Kuznicki's immediate plans include a Christmas show over the next three weekends in his Berkeley studio. Otherwise, he intends to continue his experiments with torn paper and shapes.

When asked what he hopes to accomplish with his work, Kuznicki responds, "It's my dialogue with myself, a record of my journey, my walk. I'm curious to see where it's all going to go. I try to guide it along the best I can, but it's not entirely in my hands."

THIS PAPER cut print titled, 'Only the Shadow Knows,' shows Kuznicki's use of dreamlike imagery.

ing with color, I didn't know much. Amy is an excellent colorist. She taught me a lot, and helped me work out color schemes. I owe a lot to her."

Kuznicki notes that paper cut prints pose a special challenge in the coloring. "The black lines are so strong that it can be hard to make the color the right piece of paper on top of the inked one, resulting in a black and white outline of the print. This outline is then hand-painted with watercolors. Each numbered print in an edition is colored the same way, with editions limited to 25 or 30 copies at most.

The artist's first efforts consisted of PRINTS BY Philip Kuznicki are shown through Dec. 31 at Wishbone Ltd., a new store in Valley Hills Center off Carmel Valley Road near Quail Lodge. Angela Nascar, the owner of Wishbone, describes the store's offerings as "eclectic furnishings for the home and garden." Nascar opened the store last June.

She plans to feature three or four artists a year and notes that exhibits

Muralist and activist Baca will lecture about art and social change Saturday

'GREAT WALLS Unlimited' is the title of a free slide lecture and discussion by Judith F. Baca, a Los Angeles muralist and arts activist. The lecture will begin at 2 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 4 at Carmel's Sunset Center.

The Carmel Adult School and the Monterey Peninsula Art Foundation are co-sponsors of the talk. As a visual artist, Baca is best known for her large scale public murals. This art involves extensive community organizing and participation and addresses multicultural audiences.

In the internationally known "Great Wall of Los Angeles" mural, Baca designed a work which incorporated 40 ethnic scholars, 450 multicultural neighborhood youths, 40 assisting artists and over 100 support staff to paint a half-mile long mural on the ethnic history of California.

Painted over five summers, the work describes decade by decade the contributions and struggles of California's diverse peoples from prehistoric times to the 1950's. The "Great Wall" also provides an educational program of training in inter-racial relations for the project's participants and for the people in the surrounding community.

Currently, Baca is working on "World Wall: A Vision of the Future without Fear." This 210-foot mural in seven parts addresses contemporary issues of global importance: war, peace, cooperation, interdependence and spiritual growth. Baca's work has been exhibited nationally and internationally, published in numerous periodicals and documented in several films. She has received awards and recognition for her work from community groups, the AFL/CIO, the State Assembly, the United States Senate, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley. She is a Professor of Studio Arts at the University of California, Irvine.

Diana Stork: World's second oldest instrument has rich and varied history

responded." The harp is one of the oldest instruments in the world, second only to the drum. "It is associated with the bow and arrow," Stork explains. "There are carvings of the harp from as far back as ancient Mesopotamia. Almost every culture in history has had a variation of the harp."

Today's best known harp is the classical pedal harp traditionally used in symphony orchestras. The next most common is the Celtic harp. "There are thriving harp traditions in Scotland, Ireland and Wales that go back to the sixth century. The harp was used by the poets and priest class of Druids."

The harp moved from Ireland through Europe to Italy and Spain. Missionaries then brought the instrument to South America, where it quickly gained prominence and its own special sound.

"Each country's harp music has its own rhythm, its own essential nature. For instance Peru's tends to be more minor and lyrical while the harp music of Venezuela is more syncopated because of the African influence."

The tonal quality of an individual harp is determined by various factors, including the shape of the harmonic curve, the wood, the pillars, the soundbox and the instrument's size.

During the Festival of Harps the audience will be able to see and hear many variations of this versatile instrument. Local festival events begin with a special afternoon performance at 1 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 4 at the Monterey Bay Aquarium. The performance is open to Aquarium members and their guests. Featured musicians will include local Celtic harpist Amy Krupski and singer Mary Lee Sunseri performing songs of the sea.

That evening, the festival will continue with a concert at 8 p.m. at the Steinbeck Theater at the Monterey Conference Center. Tickets for this performance are available at local bookstores or at the door. The evening concert will feature Anne Adams on the classical pedal harp. Adams has performed with the San Francisco Symphony and Opera for over 48 years.

In addition, Minnesota harpists Ann and Charlie Heymann, better known as Claireseach, will play Celtic music. Stork comments, "Ann is the world's greatest wire-strung harp player of the Celtic style. She has done copious research on the ancient manuscripts in the colleges of Ireland and developed a style that she believes is the same as the ancient harp players."

Stork, her husband Teed Rockwell and Mika Scott are members of the group aptly named Geist, which will also perform Saturday night. Geist is a German word meaning spirit. The group plays original music in the world folk and world fusion styles.

Geist uses a variety of instruments, including percussion and the Chapman Stick. The Chapman Stick has a guitar-like fretboard that is played by tapping its strings.

William Faulkner will also perform at the evening concert. Faulkner plays the Mexican Jalisco harp. He is the founder and driving force behind the popular group Mariachi Mixtlan.

Photographer Rainier a 'storyteller in transit'

awaiting death in a hospice in Varanasi, bathed in light; a Dani man reverently showing his mummified ancestor; a dark, stony mani wall leading up a mountain plateau to a shrine of blazing white; sun-bleached totem poles listing to one side in a clearing, storm-tossed driftwood in their midst; a partially carved Easter Island moai; and a Buddha being reclaimed by roots in Thailand.

The photographs that readers respond to will probably depend on their personal history and what is spiritually meaningful to them.

For Rainier, the book is "a visual diary of the places I have found where the echoes of the spirits still dwell."

We the readers are the privileged observers of a private journey. Rainier observes that "you're taking a self-portrait regardless of where you point the camera."

Adventurer with a conscience

Born in Canada to a family of explorers, musicians and rebels, Rainier early on felt the urge to live with indigenous peoples, and spent several months after his first year of university living with a group of Inuit in the Northwest Territories.

In the course of his travels, he began to feel that his own culture lacked a "significant sense of the spiritual quest." In response, Rainier began to document the spiritual awareness that he found in the remote places he visited.

Rainier usually tries to avoid Western information about the places he visits, relying instead on "primary human experiences."

Often spending weeks or months at a new place before taking out his camera, Rainier has "learned the value of slowing to discover the rhythm of what I see, and the satisfaction of treating people and places with respect."

Storyteller in transit

Sensitive to issues of exploitation and charges of being only an observer, without offering relief to suffering people, he admits that he is a "storyteller in transit." And yet, in documenting part of the human condition, Rainier is a messenger.

In this year of indigenous peoples, Rainier suggests that we pause to reflect on what some of the last forest dwellers have to offer in terms of spirit and a respect for the land that feeds them. In this era of the car phone, it behooves us to ponder the consequences of eradicating spiritualism along with species.

THIS PHOTOGRAPH by Rainier shows nuns exiting a shrine in Sarnath, India.

GERNOT'S VICTORIA HOUSE

A delightful treat for all the senses

A TRULY enchanting dining experience begins the moment you walk up the steps to Gernot's Victoria House in Pacific Grove.

Gernot and Rosemarie Leitzinger bought the grand Queen Anne Victorian on Lighthouse Avenue several years ago and have created a warm and pleasant dining atmosphere.

The Queen Anne mansion was built in 1894 by Dr. Andrew Hart, who, along with his sons, maintained a residence and home-style hospital.

Today, this almost 100-year-old Victorian, with three uniquely decorated dining rooms adorned with floral wallpaper, delicate lace curtains and chandeliers, simply takes your breath away.

Gernot and Rosemarie have successfully balanced the Queen Anne's formality with a moderately priced menu and casual ambiance. It is not uncommon to hear diners say they feel like a special guest in a private home. Victoria House is the perfect place to enjoy a relaxed and unhurried evening.

Gernot, an Austrian who studied cooking in Europe, offers years of experience to his menu. He began his career on the Monterey Peninsula in 1972 as the manager of the Holiday Inn, now the Monterey Beach Hotel. He then managed the Pebble Beach Golf and Tennis Club.

Gernot's first restaurant was the Swiss Tavern in Carmel. Before opening the Victoria House with its old-world charm, he owned the Old Europe Restaurant in Pacific Grove for 14 years.

If you've dined at Victoria House before, Juliette Piercy, manager and waitress since the restaurant opened seven years ago, will know exactly any special dining requests you may have. And, if it is your first time at Gernot's, she will guide you through the meal offering suggestions to ensure a special dining experience.

For Starters

For starters, Gernot's escargots with garlic butter is a great way to begin the meal. He prepares six escargots in a crock, which are steaming hot when placed at your table.

The Pate de Campagne with whole grain mustard and gherkins also is a wonderful starter. Perhaps, the traditional steamed artichoke, served cold with a slightly different curry mayonnaise, will enhance your taste buds.

All entrees include soup of the day — the flavors of the goulash soup made with beef and vegetables danced with just the right hint of paprika — and a light butter lettuce, Belgium endive and raddicho red leaf salad with herb vinaigrette dressing.

If you haven't already tried the Petaluma breast of duck, it's a must. Gernot's roast duck breast with raspberry brandy sauce is tender enough to cut with a fork. And, the presentation is stunning.

All of the entrees are served with Basmati rice from India or a pasta when appropriate and steamed baby vegetables such as zucchini, turnips or carrots, and green beans sauteed in shallots and dill.

The entrees

The wild boar bourguignon is perfect for diners who want something out of the ordinary. An ample service of local boar simmered in cabernet sauce with fresh chanterelles mushrooms, when in season, and onions is truly a dining adventure.

For those who prefer seafood, the large prawns sauteed in olive oil, garlic and served with a Julienne of vegetables is an excellent choice. The dish is light but filling with each individual taste highlighted perfectly with herbs.

Whatever entree you decide on, there is a selection of wines especially chosen to compliment Gernot's menu specialties. For French wine lovers, the Meursault or Puligny Montrachet is ideal with seafood. A bottle of Chateau Neuf du Pape or Nuits St. Georges highlights any meal.

Those diners dedicated to California wines will be surprised at the array of choices. The Pinot Noir or Petit Syrah is perfect with the Veal Piccata, or try a white wine from the Bernardus Vineyard in Carmel Valley.

Winding up your dining experience at Gernot's Victoria House is as exciting as beginning it. The desserts are as exquisite as Queen Anne's Victorian design.

The strawberries melba is a work of art served in a grand champagne class laced with almonds, home-made whipping cream and topped with a sprig of mint. And, Gernot's Hazelnut Meringue Suchard is divine.

A white Riesling with dessert is recommended or perhaps a strong cup of French roast coffee or espresso.

To be sure, dining at Gernot's Victoria House in Pacific Grove is a experience of food, wine and ambiance you will never forget.

JEAN WILSDON BRENNER stands next to one of her recent works entitled, 'The Cheese Sellers, Fethiye, Turkey.'

Market women of the world featured in exhibit by Carmel artist Wilsdon Brenner

"THE FABRIC of Tradition: A Tribute to Market Women," an exhibit of new work by Carmel artist Jean Wilsdon Brenner, opens Dec. 4 and continues through Feb. 6 at the Santa Catalina School Gallery in Monterey. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Created in acrylic on foam board and paper, Brenner's new work depicts the market women of Turkey, Bhutan, India, Guatemala, Peru and Ecuador.

In each piece, figures of the women with their wares emerge in relief from a background of the fabrics they have created.

"The traditional role of women in many developing countries is as complex as the designs they create," says Brenner.

"The brilliant colors of the Guatemalan market woman as she sits surrounded by her handloomed fabrics; the gleaming triangle of white cloth that covers the head and shoulders of the Turkish woman selling her produce; the layers of woolen petticoats topped by a felt stovepipe hat that adorn a Peruvian fruit seller; the statuesque elegance of a sariclad woman crowned by the brass pot she carries to market; the incongruity of the Bhutanese woman's rich brocade jacket as she sells rock-hard cubes of yak cheese. These are the women of the market who have inspired me, and it is to them that I dedicate this exhibit."

Wilsdon Brenner is a longtime resident of the peninsula. She received a B.A. in history and art from Stanford University and has had numerous shows here over the past 20 years.

Jazz Tides

By JOHN DETRO

Big week on tap for lovers of big band music; MPC hosts free Sunday concert

THE SCENE this week generates treats for those who love big bands. Goodies include a program at Monterey Peninsula College and an announcement of future fare.

Don Schamber, as even hermits know, fills the jazz chair at MPC. He says the free public concert will kick off at 4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 5, in the on-campus Music Hall. Parking's free too.

The 26-member MPC Jazz Ensemble will play works by such modern composers and arrangers as Don himself, Sam Nestico, Mike Barone. Also appearing will be the Monterey High Big Band under the baton of teacher Rob Stang.

"When people sign up with me, they get to play," Schamber notes. "And so the sections are bigger than usual — seven saxophones, for instance, and seven trumpets."

The event will be dedicated to tenor saxist Claude Gilroy. "The passing of Bob Abinante and Bill Jackson led me to think about honoring those who are still with us," Don says. "Claude has been making music around here for 40 years. From now on, we'll dedicate every concert, thanking various ones while they're alive."

The nationally-recognized arranger has a sharp wit, and comic timing like Jack Benny's. Does he plan on telling a joke or two come Sunday? "Oh, maybe," Don Schamber laughs.

Meanwhile, Frankie Lane of Villa Pompeii Restaurant in Carmel Rancho Center reports that he reached an agreement with Monterey Peninsula Jazz Orchestra.

The popular aggregation will play Monday nights there beginning Dec. 13. First set at 7 p.m. and no cover charge.

Frankie has Villa Pompeii with his wife, June Colagregre Lane, and brother Anthony Lane. They seem quite serious about offering a jazz supper club.

They're building at a wise pace, refusing to make wild promises that could not be kept down the road. And the food's superb — they've really thought about presentation and how the flavors must mesh.

All they need is a similarly reasonable response from locals who enjoy jazz and a much better than average menu.

(Don Balestrieri, jazz vocalist and deejay at KRML Radio, sings there Wednesday evenings at the least. He occasionally recommends a CD to our readers. Don's latest tip: Great Moments with Ernestine Anderson on the Concord label. It's a compilation that features George Shearing, Benny Carter, Hank Jones, Monty Alexander, on and on.)

New equipment

Seaside Community Services makes known another free show that's open to the public. It will start at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 7, at the Oldemeyer Center.

Jazz pianist Alan Berman will front a trio and the Absolute Sizzle Dance Troupe perform. Refreshments will be served.

It's all a celebration of the facility's new sound and lighting system. "This is one of the best (systems) on the Monterey Peninsula," says Dave Pacheco of Community Services. "More potent cultural events will result."

Additionally, the evening will be used to thank media reps for the support given departmental efforts.

Delightful guy

Bassist Buddy Jones says he's leading a unit every other Saturday night at Carmel Valley's Los Laureles Lodge. With him from 7 p.m. until midnight are flugelhorn man Jackie Coon and Eddie Erickson on guitar and banjo. (The last gig was Nov. 27 so simply grab your calendar and go from there. No cover.)

Buddy roomed with Bird Parker when both were very young men in Manhattan. He has played beside more jazz giants than I can name here and now. When last we chatted, he revealed pure treasure — a publication put out by the Al Cohn Memorial Jazz Collection at East Stroudsburg University in Pennsylvania.

Dr. Larry Fisher of the school music department oversees that collection. He recently issued the second Jazz Family Album — photos sent along by interested parties from all over the country.

They're wonderful images: Dizzy rehearsing Phil Woods and Ernie Wilkins at Birdland (1956), Jimmy Rushing at Newport (1958), Bill Basie in New York City (1956), Lester Young and Art Farmer at Birdland (1956), that storied Gerry Mulligan rehearsal in Central Park (1950).

Seldon Powell, Cannonball Adderley, Allen Eager, Mose Allison in 1954, Apollo Theater headliners, Dave Lambert smiling wide, Lou Levy looking serious, Zoot Sims in a gag shot with Mousie Alexander and Jimmy Rowles, scores more. Buddy's in there with Al Cohn, guitarist Mary Osborne and Jackie Coon (Carmel Valley — 1985). Jones said copies may be obtained for $10 apiece by writing to the non-profit Cohn Collection, care of Dr. Fisher, East Stroudsburg University, East Stroudsburg, PA 18301.

BILLY BOY Arnold recorded important Chicago blues singles in the 1950s. Now, Alligator Records has given him new life via the CD entitled Back Where I Belong. His voice and mouth harp have matured — and the session evidences great energy too.

DEPRESSION

My roommate was depressed. More than the blues. I mean seriously depressed. She always looked sad. Cried a lot. She couldn't sleep, eat, or do any of her work.

Treat it! Defeat it!

Most of the time she wouldn't talk to me. I just couldn't reach her.

I figured she needed to get professional help, before her pain got worse. So I checked it out.

I was amazed. Once her depression was diagnosed, treatment was effective and began to work within a few weeks.

Director Eastwood lends sure hand, but 'Perfect World' is static

By CRAIG ARNOTT

THE IMAGE that opens A Perfect World is arresting. In slow motion, the camera pans across the body of escaped convict Butch Haynes (Kevin Costner) as he lies on his back amid tall grass.

It is a windy day. But instead of leaves wafting around his face, we see paper money. This is a powerful use of imagery.

It is unfortunate that the rest of A Perfect World rarely reaches such an intriguing poetic height. Clint Eastwood's latest project is honest but lumbering, a well-meaning film that turns mawkish and syrupy in the hands of screenwriter John Lee Hancock.

It is the fall of 1963 and Haynes and his cellmate have made a break from a Texas prison. A bungled car theft turns into a kidnapping as the pair flees with

A PERFECT WORLD

Del Monte Shopping Center
Starring: Kevin Costner,

Director: Clint Eastwood

Philip Perry, (T.J. Lowther), a boy who is a Jehovah's Witness.

In Dallas, tough, gnarled Texas Ranger Red Garnett (Eastwood) is making plans to track Haynes. His old-fashioned ideas about manhunting clash with the interests of Sally Gerber (Laura Dern), a feisty criminologist, who's more concerned with motive than capture. Together this odd couple boards a customized RV and begins the chase.

Forming bond

Back on the lam, Haynes has dispensed with his fellow convict and now busies himself with teaching Philip about the rules of the road and his elastic interpretation of the law. The two steal cars, engage in petty theft and have a series of narrow escapes, all the while forming a bond.

This is a promising launch, but A Perfect World gets tangled in fuzzy sentiment as the scenes between Costner and Lowther, while genuinely affecting and convincing, are milked for all they are worth.

The plot takes a backseat as the pair become cute road buddies, with the feds plodding after them and having a few wacky mishaps that bear more than a passing resemblance to a Smokey and the Bandit movie.

It isn't until nearly the end that the film takes its crucial dramatic turn.

It is with this film that Costner finally climbs off his high horse and gives Haynes a tenderness that doesn't seem staged. Still, he and Eastwood are primarily members of the Three "S's" School of acting: scowl, squint and swagger.

Eastwood himself appears to be regressing; his Garnett is a throwback to his spaghetti western days, complete with steely threats and swinging fists.

Intense dialogue, action

Lowther is very good as the impressionable Philip, though it's hard not to be concerned about the intensity of some of the dialogue and action involving an actor who is no older than about eight.

Dern's role seems an afterthought to round out the cast and offer a more progressive look at the events.

Eastwood's competent and skillful direction — reveals here a gift for filming large expanses of land. With a less contrived screenplay he would certainly have had more ammunition.

A Perfect World is fine viewing if the audience doesn't mind routine storytelling or an engineered tug at the heart.

When the temperature begins to fall...

You'll find that your pet needs a little extra care from you. Check outdoor water bowls often when it's below freezing. An outdoor dog needs a dry, elevated dog house with clean, dry bedding and a flap over the opening to keep out the drafts. The best solution is to let your pets - both cats and dogs - sleep inside when the weather gets cold or wet. Also remember that antifreeze tastes good to pets, but it is a deadly poison!! This also applies to children!! Watch for leakage under your car. Please remember your pets are part of your family, and please give them extra care in the winter.

We make a donation to the SPCA the first time you use our service.

'Man Who Came to Dinner' brings yuletide comedy to Carmel

By JAMES P. KINNEY

IMAGINE SOMEBODY as outrageously opinionated and acerbic as Rush Limbaugh or Joan Rivers moving suddenly into your home, setting up camp in your living room and disrupting your life for a full three weeks leading up to Christmas.

That's what happens to the Stanley family of Mesalia, Ohio, in the spry, venerable, and still engagingly funny comedy by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman, The Man Who Came to Dinner. The play is presented by Staff Players Repertory Company and runs through Dec. 18 at Carmel's Indoor Forest Theater.

Karner Benjamin, with a powerful voice and presence, grounds the play as Sheridan Whiteside, a New York writer and critic who becomes the Stanleys' reluctant guest after an accident on their slippery front steps.

The Man Who Came to Dinner

by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman
8 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays.
2:30 p.m. Sundays through Dec. 18
Indoor Forest Theater, Carmel
Tickets: 624-1531

Maneuvering imperiously around the room in his wheelchair, presiding like an ill-tempered deity from some high-rise Gotham Olympus, he hurls thunderbolts loaded with sarcastic venom at all within earshot. "Go back to your miserable sex life, Miss Bed Pan," he snarls at the terrified nurse, Miss Preen, who is hired to oversee his convalescence.

Theorizing about humor is a risky business. There will always be a good deal of magic surrounding what makes people laugh. But it seems to me that what keeps this old comedic warhorse appealing is something vulnerable and even endearing about crusty, condescending Mr. Whiteside. He shows real sensitivity towards the Stanley teenagers and their attempts to find themselves. He deals gently with the family's servants, starstruck cook Sarah (Terry Royster) and dutiful butler John (Michael Eskridge).

This being community theater, it comes as no surprise that there is a wide range of ability between individual performances, from Benjamin's thoroughly professional demeanor to some awkward movement and delivery by those relatively new to the stage. But the 17-member cast is able to extract enough nuggets of golden humor from the sexagenarian script to make for an entertaining evening.

Notable supporting performances include newcomer Suzi Commins' portrayal of Maggie Cutler, Whiteside's long-suffering private secretary. Totally in character, her subtle body language speaking as eloquently as her words, we watch her battle vigorously against the heavies Whiteside has lined up against her. Hers is a splendid, total, attention-getting performance.

Another newcomer, Peter Eberhardt, displays high energy and honed comic skill as the bitchy, mocking English actor, Beverly Carlton. Susanne Burns is totally convincing and watchable as the sorely put-upon nurse, Miss Preen. Loel Shuler is wonderfully wacky as the sweetly disturbed Harriet, calling to mind scenes from Arsenic and Old Lace, another wonderful comedy from that theatrical golden age in the late '30s.

Young Justin McChesney sharply captures adolescent all-thumbs awkwardness as son Richard. Veteran comic Michael Robbins is characteristically droll and entertaining as old wisecracking crony, Banjo. Special mention should be made of Suzanne Crain's portrayal of Lorraine Sheldon, the conniving, lord-chasing, mattress-clawing vamp whose deserved comeuppance brings the play to its happy conclusion. Direction is by Marcia Gambrell ("How does she get all those bodies in that little bitty space") Hovick.

MONTEREY PENINSULA PROPERTIES GUIDE

REAL ESTATE Viewpoint

by John Saar, Broker

How to Help Your Realtor Sell Your Home

Once your home is listed for sale, it may be difficult for you to step aside and let your agent take over. When prospective buyers arrive, you may want to stand by to point out the closet extenders, the hidden spice cabinet behind the kitchen door, the energy saving storm windows or the up[dated copper plumbing. If you really want to help, however, you'll leave the house whenever it's being shown!

We've found that the sales process does not really begin until buyers begin to voice their objections about a property. Sometimes these concerns are serious. Often, however, people voice objections as a defense mechanism because they really love the house and they want to buy it. We're trained to know the difference. If a seller is standing at the agent's elbow, the buyer won't be comfortable enough to let this process take place, and we could lose the sale. It may be hard, but it's crucial to get out of the way and let the agent go to work.
